YOUTH STEALS $189.53 FROM ADAMS EXPRESS

When Arrested Here Hands Over $162.10 to the Police.

WANTED A GOOD TIME

J. R. Huss, Tyrone Young Man, Came to Bellefonte, to Enjoy the Fourth—Came to Grief After Flashing $100 Bill—Wilted After Arrest.

J. R. Huss, a Tyrone young man, was picked up in Bellefonte last Friday by Chief of Police Dukeman on suspicion of having stolen $189.53 from the Tyrone office of the Adams Express Co. He admitted the theft and handed over to Chief Dukeman $162.10 of the stolen money. The remainder Huss said he had "blown in" on a good time on the Fourth of July. He was picked up by the police after returning from Hughes field where he had witnessed the Tyrone-Bellefonte baseball game. On Saturday Chief Dukeman turned the young man over to Officer Giles, who took him back to Tyrone.

When Agent Edward Rine, of the Adams Express Co. office at Tyrone, discovered the theft he suspected young Huss, who formerly worked for the company. He sent word to Bellefonte and Chief Dukeman was on the lookout for Huss. The latter, it was learned, had flashed a $100 bill here in the presence of Luther Fishburn on the previous night. Returning from the baseball game on Friday afternoon Huss walked into the Bush House. Chief Dukeman followed and quietly informed him that he was wanted in the Adams Express office, just a few doors away. Huss accompanied the officer there and once inside the office Chief Dukeman charged him with the theft. When Huss learned that he was known to have exhibited a $100 bill he wilted. He promptly acknowledged the theft and digging into his pockets fished out $162.10, or all but $27.43 of the amount stolen. Huss gave no explanation for his rash act other than that he wanted to have a good time. Huss is about 20 years of age.

GAME LAW POINTERS

Sale of Licenses Begins Just as Soon as They are Printed.

Dr. Joseph Kalbfus, secretary of the State Game Commission, says that the new hunters' licenses will be placed on sale as soon as they can be printed.

The licenses will be issued by the county treasurers, not by the state game commission, and each county will have a serial number.

The state game commission has issued a table showing just what are the game seasons in Pennsylvania today, the statement being based upon legislation which has been enacted into law. The statement is well worth keeping in mind. It is as follows:

Bear number allowed, unlimited; season, October 1 to January; traps prohibited.

Deer, male with visible horns two inches above hair, one to a hunter, November 10 to 25, inclusive.

Elk protected until November, 1921.

English Mongolian, Chinese and ring-necked phesants, 10 a day, 20 a week and 50 a season; October 15 to November 30, inclusive.

Hare or rabbit, 10 in a day; November 1 to December 31, inclusive.

Hungarian quail, 5 a day, 20 a week and 30 a season; October 12 to November 30, inclusive.

Plover, upland or grass, unlimited; July 15 to January 1.

Quail or partridge, 10 a day, 40 a week and 75 a season; November 1 to December 14, inclusive; cannot be bought or sold no matter where killed.

Raccoon unlimited; September 1 to January 1.

Ruffed grouse, 5 a day, 20 a week, 50 a season; October 15 to November 30; cannot be bought or sold.

Shore birds, snipe, jack or wilson, unlimited; September 1 to January 1.

Squirrels, fox, grey or black, 6 of combined kinds in a day; October 15 to November 30, inclusive.

Webfooted waterfowl, unlimited; September 1 to April 10; not to be sold between January 1 and September 1.

Wild turkeys closed for two years.

Woodcock, 10 a day, 20 a week and 50 a season; October 15 to November 30, inclusive; cannot be bought or sold.

Philipsburg Buys Sprinkler.

The borough Council of Philipsburg has placed an order for the purchase of a street sprinkler.

CO. L. SCORES RECORD FOR GUARD MOUNT DUTY

Finest Ever Witnessed by Regu- Army Officer.

BREEZY CAMP LETTER

Centre County Boys do Their Own Cooking on Long March—Good Weather Contributes to Enjoyment of Camp at Selinsgrove.

(Special despatch to The Republican)

Selinsgrove, July 9 — Company L, of Bellefonte, was on guard mount last night. Today First Lieutenant Harris, 14th Infantry, U. S. A., the inspecting officer, announced that the work of the company was the finest he had ever witnessed in the militia. Brigadier General Clement publicly congratulated the company.

By J. Homer Decker.

Camp Charles Morrison, Selinsgrove, Pa., July 9.—Here we are in camp, and a dandy camp it is at that. Every Centre county soldier is on deck, enjoying first class health and enjoying camp life to the utmost. The boys are taking off their hats to the Weather Man, for the brand he has handed out this week is all that one could desire. The days have not been uncomfortably hot and the nights have been ideal for sleeping. In the old days camp life may have been a snap for the national guardsman, but things are different. Every man is kept on the go, he is constantly learning something and plenty of exercise with good wholesome food combine to make a present-day camp well worth the money that the State puts up annually.

Company L, Twelfth Regiment, commanded bo Captain William H. Brown and Lieutenants Taylor and Blackford, left Bellefonte last Friday morning before lots of the town folks were up. We pretty nearly missed the train owing to the absence of Cameron McGarvey, who was unable to report on account of illness. We finally boarded the train, but not until the conductor of the Lewisburg road made some remarks in keeping with the temperature and which if repeated here would probably result in his taking a little trip in the "fly."

When we pulled out of Bellefonte we had fifty-four men and our three officers, Battalion Adjutant H. Laird Curtin and Lieutenant S. M. Huff, of the medical corps. They boarded the officers' car at Lewisburg. At the latter place we were joined by Company A, Captain Morrow, also by Colonel William R. Fullmer, Lieutenant Colonel Barber and Captain Samuel Wolf. The regimental train was made up at Sunbury, with Company L, Captain Brown; Company I, Captain McMurray; Company D. Captain Kunkle; Company H, Captain Poorman; Company M, Captain McBride; Company E, Captain Clement; Company K, Captain Blaine; Company G, Captain Barton; Company C, Captain Hester, and Company F, Captain Harrington.

It was 11 o'clock when we arrived at Selinsgrove and then we had better than a mile to walk to camp. We were in camp but a few minutes when we were called out under arms for the official camp opening, always an inspiring scene. This ceremony was over in half an hour and, of course, just about the time the boys were busy getting the camp in shape along came the usual shower. With an eye to the chief end of man everybody turned in and helped to prevent the mess tent from blowing down. By the time the shower was over every fellow was soaked. It made no impression on the weather and all hands sweltered in the heat for the remainder of the day.

Our first meal in camp made us feel more at home and more desirous of remaining. The meal was prepared by our efficient cooks, William Smith, of Danville, and Harry Whiteman, of Milesburg. It was served at 2 p. m., and consisted of good beefsteak, potatoes, etc. Bud Hamilton and Wilbur Morgan are the assistants and they are right on the the job. Occasionally Quartermaster Sergeant McCafferty is prompted to say some funny words before he can find them, but I am sure they will "get wise" before the end of camp.

Corporal Arthur C. Dale is doing fine. I'll bet a $5 bill that he too, will "get wise" before we start for home. He works like a trooper. If Corporal Blaine Port doesn't stop making so much noise at night I greatly fear he will be detailed home to keep company with his steam pressing machine. The other night somebody threw a beer bottle in Jeff Tierney'e front yard. The excitement subsided when it was discovered that the bottle was empty.

First Sergeant Claude W. Smith warmly commended the boys on working so faithfully in getting the camp in order, and, of course, Company L's streets look the best.

Johnny Nighthart, the barber, is too busy to stop to breathe. Close shaves always have been associated with the battlefield.

Artificer John Morrison always accumulates a sore foot about the time we start out for a hike. Fitzezy Yeager might find in him a good client for corn salve.

Harry Holz and Clevenstine certainly made a good job of it in patching our "fly," as a half-dozen rookies are willing to testify. It has already conducted them through their first degree.

Jimmy Decker thinks camp life and this kind of work a mere diversion as compared with the strenuous order of things in the Pennsy freight station office at home.

Thanks to the advance detail, composed of John M. Fisher, Jr., Thomas Bathurst, Harry Rice and Harry Whiteman, under Sergeant Wilbur E. Saxion, for getting our baggage in place.

Company bulletin —Sergeant Lee Smith has red hair still.

Lieutenants Taylor and Blackford were both on the sick list but, like Finnegan, were no sooner on before they were off again.

All the boys were sorry that Donald M. Snyder, one of our musicians, could not accompany us. He was detained at home by the death of his mother, but arrived here on Monday.

Bachelors belonging to Company L will be put to the test on Thursday when we go out on a hike. The program is for every man to do his own cooking. Mrs. Rorer should be on hand to get some pointers.

Thanks to John M. Fisher, general boss of the Lewisburg railroad, for the broom furnished us to keep our car clean enroute to camp. John is an apostle of doctrine that cleanliness is next to godliness.

Anybody at home wishing to communicate with soldiers in our company should address their letters in care of Camp Morrison, Company L, Twelfth Regiment, Infantry, Sunbury, Pa.

Everybody Enjoyed the Fourth.

Bellefonte had the nicest kind of a Fourth of July and so splendidly successful was every feature of the big program that everybody is already looking forward to a demonstration next year on similar but more elaborate lines. A large crowd was in town for the day. The parade in the morning was, of course, the big feature. In the afternoon Bellefonte defeated the Tyrone baseball team, 7-4. In the evening the exercises at the school commons were marred by rain and were held in the school building.

The appearance of the suffragists in the morning parade attracted spectators from all directions. Most persons were surprised at the number of ladies who courageously marched with banners of "Votes for Women." The dignity attending every detail of this feature of the parade excited favorable comment all along the line of march.

It had been the intention of "The Republican" to voice its own opinion and comment on the various features of the day, but we cheerfully extend that privilege to the Woman's Club under whose auspices the celebration was held. The club prepared the following statement:

To the Public:—

The Woman's Club wishes to thank Mr. Hunter and Mr. Hall for taking charge of the free automobile ride event, also the owners who kindly sent cars, giving pleasure to about five hundred children, many of whom had never been in an automobile before.

We heartily thank both the fire companies, organizations, women, children, and business houses who aided in making the parade a succes. The Boys' Band of Milesburg was also a feature of the parade, and gave much pleasure by their remarkable concert on the Diamond where their beautiful music and efforts to please charmed all who heard them.

Prizes were awarded to seventeen children competing for the best Uncle Sam, Columbia, cow boy, cow girl, Indian, Indian squaw, go-cart and doll, gipsy, clown, and fancy dress. These prizes were a one-half fare ticket each to all the events of Chautauqua week coming July 17th.

A prize of $5.00 in gold was awarded Mrs. Edward Harper for the most beautifully decorated automobile. A prize of $5.00 in gold was awarded Philip Shoemaker as the best town Mummer, who, with his handsome pony was not only beautifully gotten up but acted his part perfectly. Paul Sheffer was also a clown, and won the $5.00 in gold in the bicycle class.

A prize of $5.00 in gold for the best organization float was awarded the Moose for their very handsomely gotten up float.

In the advertisement class, for beauty originality, the greatest amount of effort, and the best business advertisement, the Bellefonte Fuel & Supply Co. was unanimously given first honor; but because both partners of the company and the designer and decorator of the float, were actively interested in the management of the parade, first money was not accepted. $5.00 in gold was given to Sidney Krumrine's Drug store for their very excellent and original float advertisement, "the old Fourth and the new". The second prize, also $5.00 in gold, was awarded to the A. G. Morris, Jr., coal yard float. Honorable mention is made of Miss Snyder and Mrs. Aiken's very original and dainty advertisement in a stylish victoria, displaying the beautiful gowns of the one and millinery of the other, worn by two charming young women. Honorable mention is also made of the Bell Telephone Company's "Blue Bell," not only the costume which was beautifully gotten up and a splendid business advertisement, but the dignity and bearing of the wearer added much to the display. Mention must also be made of the Joseph Ceader ice cream and bakery float, with its occupants, which was very fine, as was also the Basket Shop's many little advertisers and their wares; Katz's store, the DEMOCRATIC WATCHMAN'S rooster, the Keystone Gazette with their faithful little reader, the Palace livery with its stunning turnout, as well as the hospital's first aid ambulance, which was a great and useful addition to the parade; and hosts of others all so good and deserving of many thanks for their efforts, but too numerous to mention.

Thanks to Mr. Clayton Brown for giving the Scenic at cost, where nine hundred persons, principally women and children, enjoyed the fine pictures and music free.

We also thank Mr. James Hughes, Mr. Donald Wallace, and Mr. James Davis for their efforts and work in getting up the free base ball game where there was an attendance of about five hundred men and boys. We also thank the home players for their work in the past three weeks in spite of the great heat. Thanks are due to the New Century Club, of Tyrone, who so kindly came for the aid of the cause, making no charge but their railroad fare.

Through the efforts of Mr. Weston, boys of surrounding towns and country, as well as the boys of our town, were welcomed to the beautiful swimming pool. Hundreds of boys enjoyed to the fullest this great treat.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union had barrels of ice water placed all over town. That the thirsty appreciated this good thought is shown in the fact that it took over two hundred buckets of water to keep them filled.

At 7:00 p. m., in the High school building, five hundred children were served with free ice cream cones, some little ones telling us that they never before tasted this most loved of all childish dainties. Mrs. Joseph Ceader gave the cream and cones to the committee at actual cost.

At 8:00 p. m., in the High school auditorium, three very fine addresses were delivered by Rev. Dr. Schmidt, Mr. Harry Keller, and Mr. John Blanchard; accompanied by a chorus of very beautiful voices kindly assembled by Miss Mary Bradley, their rendering of our patriotic songs making them seem even more dear to our loyal American hearts.

A very elaborate band concert, for which the Coleville band had been practicing for weeks, for which greatest treat a most attractive selection had been arranged, and for which event the High school commons had been lighted by the Bellefonte Electric Co., was entirely spoiled by the hard storm which interfered with what would have been a most appropriate ending to a most successful free day.

Thanks are also due to the public who so freely contributed the necessary funds, in countless instances offering more than asked, so gladly was it given. Money subscribed amounted to $215.00, entire cost of day $202.56, showing balance in bank to credit of Safe and Sane Fourth fund of $12.44, to be used on July 4th, 1914.

Very respectfully submitted,

COMMITTEE OF SAFE AND SANE FOURTH.

CENTRE COUNTY PICNIC

Delightful Outing Enjoyed at Belmont Mansion, Phila., June 28th.

The annual basket picnic of the Centre County Association of Philadelphia was held on June 28th at Belmont Mansion, Fairmont Park, in that city. For a time it was feared that a heavy rain storm would interfere with the program for enjoying dinner on the grass but happily such was not the case. Through the assistance of Ira D. Garman benches and tables were secured and the dinner was held in the open air. The picnic was well attended and all present had a most enjoyable time. Before adjournment resolutions were adopted on the death of the late Dr. Roland G. Curtin, for years president of the association.

Still Forging Checks.

The Lock Haven Democrat says: The individual who forged the name of T. R. Harter, of Loganton to a check in Pittsburg a month or more ago in payment for $80 worth of goods ordered, is still working the same game, without being detected, as is shown by the receipt of a check at the Loganton National bank yesterday from a Philadelphia bank, for $50, made payable to the Bellevue Stratford hotel, of that city, and bearing the signature of T. R. Harter, and which Mr. Harter, pronounces a forgery.

COMPOSITORS WANTED.

Two compositors are wanted at The Republican office. Good wages.

Charley Tripple was a visitor in town with old chums over the Fourth of July.

ROBBED CHILD'S BANK AND ALSO TWO MORE

George E. Miller Cleaned Out Heverly Home at Mt. Eagle.

CONFESSED TO POLICE

Picked up Here Last Week for Theft Committed in December—Describes to Captors How he Disposed of Some Stolen Goods.

Although he "went through" the home of E. E. Heverly at Mt. Eagle back in December of last year, George E. Miller, a former boarder, managed to elude the police until Thursday, June 26th, when he was located here and arrested by Chief of Police Dukeman. He was taken to Howard for a hearing before Squire Schenck, who bound him over for court. On Saturday, last, Chief Dukeman visited Miller at the jail here and finally prevailed on him to admit the charge. Miller did so. On Monday, in the presence of District Attorney Fortney, Chief Dukeman and Deputy Sheriff Rowe, he made a complete confession.

"Robbing a child's bank" aptly applies to Miller's case, only that instead of robbing one he tapped three, each containing $5.95. He also took a gold watch, a revolver, a razor, a cap and white sweater and $10 in money. While employed on the railroad improvement work at Mt. Eagle Miller boarded at the Heverly home. He was regarded as trustworthy and when the Heverly family had occasion last December to visit in Tyrone Miller was left in charge of the house. During the absence of the Heverlys he cleaned up pretty nearly everything in sight.

Miller was next heard of working near Sunbury. The local police were advised to be on the lookout for him and on June 26th he turned up here. When Chief Dukeman nabbed him Miller denied all knowledge of the theft. After taking the cap and sweater he threw them away in the woods a short distance from the Heverly home. The watch he had sold for a trifle to a foreigner near Sunbury. The revolver, he said, he had thrown into the river. The money had been spent. According to Chief Dukeman Miller a year or so ago boarded with the Adam Fisher family at Beech Creek and skipped out after taking a suit of clothes and some other articles. Having confessed Miller will shortly go before Judge Orvis for sentence.

MOTOR PARTY INJURED.

Altoona Tourists Ditch Car at Milesburg to Avoid Collision.

Henry Doer, an Altoona meat dealer, and three ladies, also of that city, narrowly escaped serious injury and probably death in an automobile accident at Milesburg on Thursday of last week. To avoid colliding with the morning passenger train from Tyrone Mr. Doerr ditched his car, which tumbled into the culvert at the crossing just a short distance from Milesburg station. Two of the ladies were painfully but not dangerously injured. All four were brought to Bellefonte in the automobile of Dr. R. G. H. Hayes and their injuries were dressed at his office, the local hospital being crowded to capacity on the day of the accident.

The accident happened while the morning train from Tyrone was backing into Milesburg after having come to Bellefonte. The Doerr car was spinning along at a lively pace as it approached the point where the public road crosses the railroad. Mr. Doerr endeavored to turn his car into the culvert without striking the train, but in this he was unsuccessful. The step of the second coach of the train side-swiped the auto and the machine turned over into the ditch. The car was pretty badly wrecked. Examination made after the accident revealed that the brakes had been applied by Mr. Doerr, indicating that he had first tried to stop the car when he found himself almost directly in front of the rapidly moving train. All four members of the party were able to return by train to Altoona later in the day.

CIRCUS COMING AUG. 28

Sig. Sautell's Show Booked for Bellefonte Next Month.

Sig. Sautell's big circus will be in Bellefonte on Thursday, August 28th. The first advance car will be here in the next week or two.

The circus has 23 cars, including 6 coaches, 8 flat cars for the canvas and animals and 5 stock cars.

The show comes here from Lock Haven and goes the following day to Tyrone.

Married at Boalsburg.

John R. Gross, of State College, and Miss Eva R. Catherman, of Linden Hall, were married at the Reformed church parsonage at Boalsburg on June 30th, Rev. S. C. Stover officiating.

THREE NEW HIGHWAYS FOR CENTRE COUNTY

One is Bellefonte to WarriorsMark Via Filmore.

NOW UP TO GOVERNOR

Legislature Provides New Routes to be Taken Over by State June 1, 1915—Potters Mills to State College Via Boalsburg

The long fight waged by Frank H. Clemson, George J. Stevenson and others from Patton and Halfmoon townships to secure a State highway from Bellefonte to WarriorsMark via Fillmore met with success in the closing hours of the Legislature. If the road bill meets with approval of Governor Tener the road will be taken over and made a State highway on June 1, 1915. Two additional State highway routes for Centre County are provided for in the bill. One is from Potters Mills to State College, via Boalsburg, the other from Centre Hall to Madisonburg and thence to Union County. The sections of the road bill making provision for taking over these roads as State highways follow:

Route 306—A certain public road beginning at a point on Route No. 27 in the borough of Centre Hall in Centre County and passing eastward through the townships of Potter and Gregg, thence to Madisonburg in Miles township, thence over State lands for a distance of eight or more miles, thence through the township of Lewis and on to a point known as Forrest in West Buffalo township, Union County, connecting with Route No. 26 at the Pontius farm one mile east of Mifflinburg.

Route 307—A certain public road beginning at the intersection of said road with State highway route No. 29 at the village of Potters Mills, in Potter township, Centre County, and passing westward along the side of Penns Valley through the village of Boalsburg thence on by the "back way" to State College and thence uniting with State highway route No. 56.

Route 346—A certain section of public road beginning near Water Street at the intersection of said road with Route 55 and passing through part of Huntingdon County by way of Spruce Creek to Colerain, thence by Route 56 to Warriors-Mark at the intersection of said road with Route No. 56 and passing through part of Huntingdon County into Centre County through the township of Halfmoon by the way of Stormstown thence through Patton township by way of Filmore thence to Bellefonte to unite with Route No. 58.

BREAK GROUND MONDAY

Gehret & Lambert to Erect Building for Automobile Plant.

General Manager Seig, of the Bellefonte Automobile Co., announced yesterday that the charter for the company would be received tomorrow or Saturday and that on Monday, next, ground will be broken for the building for the manufacturing plant at the Hughes athletic field. The contract has been awarded to Gehret & Lambert. The building will be of stone, 374 x 60, and will be of two stories, the second of monitor type. The roof will be of structural iron. It is expected that from two and one-half to three months will be required to complete the building.

While the erection of the plant is under way a sample car will be built at the old swing factory. Work on this will be begun the latter part of next week.

Examine Your Label.

In the last week corrections have been made on all payments on subscription. Examine your label and see if proper credit has been given for your payment. If you have paid your subscription and have not received credit kindly notify this office at once. All readers are asked to keep in mind the fact that the postal department rules require payment of subscriptions within one year. While the rule is an arbitrary one and to some persons one that seems unfair, it has just been upheld by the United States Supreme Court and newspapers must obey it. In order that we may comply with this rule we ask the co-operation of our subscribers.

Injured in Auto Accident.

The venerable George S. Gray, who is now past 83 years of age, was badly injured on Saturday evening, June 28, by being struck by an automobile while at his home near Stormstown. His hip was fractured and he sustained painful bruises about the body. The car which struck Mr. Gray was driven by a young man who first run into a pig and then lost control of the machine.

GIVE FLOOD WARNINGS

New State Law Aims to Save Loss of Life and Property.

Farley Gannett, engineer of the water supply ...n ofPennsylvania, has given out the following statement relative ... of the commission in putting into effect the Ulman bill for establishing stations to give flood warnings:

On April 7, 1913, an act was introduced in the House of Representatives at Harrisburg by Representative Ulman, of Williamsport, directing the Water Supply commission of Pennsylvania to establish and maintain gauging stationson Pennsylvania streams, for the purpose of issuing flood warnings. This act, which carries an appropriation of $10,000, was passed by the Legislature and signed by the Governor on May 23, 1913, and provides that freshet and flood conditions be telegraphed and telephoned to muncipalities where flood damage is likely to occur, forecasting, as near as may be, the probable maximum gauge heights which will be reached, and the probable time of the arrival of such maximum stages.

This bill was a result of the flood of last March, and was prepared and introduced, in order that the residents of the state might be warned, with some degree of accuracy, of the height which would probably be reached by floods and of the probable time of arrival of the crest at specific localities, so that precautions might be taken to protect lives and property.

The United States weather bureau officials at Pittsburgh, Harrisburg and Philadelphia, issue flood warnings of the probable height and time of arrival of crest at these three cities, on the Allegheny, Susquehanna and Delaware rivers, respectively. The streams in the Allegheny and Monongahela water sheds are being gauged more completely by the water supply commission of Pennsylvania than those of the Susquehanna, and much information is therefore, available for the prediction of flood crests. The Delaware river is subject to the influence of New York and New Jersey tributaries, so that the forecasting of floods on that stream will have to be taken up with those states. Because of these facts, the water supply commission of Pennsylvania expects to initiate the forecasting of floods on the Susquehanna water shed, and to gradually extend the system throughout the state. As the demand for this system originated from the West Branch of the Susquehanna river, the commission will take its first steps under the bill in the basin of the West Branch of the Susquehanna.

The West Branch of the Susquehanna river, which joins the North Branch at Northumberland, drains a total area of approximately 7,000 square miles, lying entirely within the state, and having a total length of 226 miles from its headwaters to its mouth, with numerous large tributaries, several of which drain over 1,000 square miles, all joining the river above Williamsport, which is 41 miles above the mouth of confluence. The headwaters in Cambria and Clearfield counties lie in a bituminous coal mining area, the country being thickly settled and dotted with boroughs and villages. Some farming is carried on in this area, and the mountains are partly covered with second growth timber. From Clearfield to Lock Haven the basin is sparsely settled, little farming being carried on, and the country in general is rough and rugged, the hills being well covered with second growth timber. From Lock Haven to the mouth the drainage basin is well settled along the main stream, and several of its tributaries, with considerable farming carried on in the valleys, which are bordered by rugged mountains covered with timber.

The upper portion of the drainage basin is mountainous and rugged, and the river follows a winding course through a narrow channel, hemmed in by hills and mountains, parallel to and west of the backbone ridge of the Allegheny Mountains, and cutting through the mountains as it turns southward at Halls. The slope of the headwaters is steep, portions of the river falling at the rate of eight feet per mile in Keating, but from this point to the mouth the slope becomes flatter, falling at the average rate of two and one-half feet per mile. The northern portion of the basin is subject to a mean annual precipitation of 35 to 40 inches, and the southern part from 40 to 45 inches.

The water supply commission of Pennsylvania, among the 75 stations which it is operating throughout the state, maintains at the present time eight gauging stations in the basin of the West Branch of the Susquehanna river, located on the main river at Renovo and Williamsport, Bald Eagle creek at Beech Creek station and at Milesburg, Spring creek at Bellefonte, Pine creek at Waterville, Loyalsock creek at Forksville and Lycoming creek at Williamsport. In addition to these stations and in order to carry out the provisions of flood warning act, the water supply commission of Pennsylvania contemplates establishing eighteen additional stations on the West Branch and its tributaries located on the Susquehanna river at Lewisburg, Karthaus, Clearfield and Mahaffey; on Kettle creek above Westport; four on the Sinnemahoning creek and its tributaries; on Clearfield, Moshannon, Chest, Little Pine, Lycoming, Loyalsock, Muncy, Buffalo and Ohinisquaque creeks.

In addition to the new stream gauging stations, rainfall stations will be established on these streams in connection with the few now maintained by the United States weather beureau, so that there will be at least one rain gauge on each stream upon which there is a river gauge, and all data will be immediately communicated by the local observers to the office of the water supply commission, in Harrisburg.

During the coming year it is proposed, if possible, to rate each station enumerated above; that is, determine the amount of water passing in each stream for all gauge heights, and charts showing the relation of gauge height to discharge. Charts will also show the relation in time and quantity of water passing the upstream stations with that passing those down stream. In addition, the relation between rainfall and the river discharge for each station, and the drainage area above it will be determined, for, in predicting the amount and probable height of floods, it will be necessary to assemble all these factors for each station, in order to arrive at final conclusions.

Studies of past floods on this water shed are now being undertaken, so that relation between rainfall and gauge height may be determined and charts drawn to show the relation between up river and down river stations during floods, and the time elapsing between the arrival of the crest at these different river stations and between the various stations on the tributaries and main river.

To determine the location of the new gauging and rainfall stations, a reconnoissance of the Susquehanna water shed will shortly be made by the water supply commission, under the guidance of Benjamin K. Focht, vice chairman; Representative Ulman, of Williamsport, and Farley Gannett, engineer of the commission.

Mosquito Prevention.

State Zoologist H. A. Surface, Harrisburg, is authority for the statement tha there is no need of suffering from the torments and evils of mosquitoes, as the mosquito nuisance is very easily prevented if rightly undertaken. He says that these pests breed or mate in pools or small ponds, and more frequently in vessels containing rain water.

The young mosquitoes are the little wrigglers or wriggletails commonly seen in rain water barrels. As they can not breathe under water, but must come to the surface of the water in order to obtain fresh air, it is a very easy matter to destroy them, even in places where one can not get rid of standing water. Of course, the fundamental principle in mosquito control is to destoy their breeding places by emptying water vessels, draining pools, ponds and swamps, and being careful that there is no stagnant water for them to breed in.

The worst kind of mosquito infestation in any neighborhood can be suppressed and the pests disappear within two weeks, if proper and efficient steps are taken toward breaking up the breeding places, or oiling water where the young live. A film of oil, such as common kerosene oil, or lamp oil, on the surface of the water will destoy the larvae within a few minutes. When the oil is first poured on the water these little wrigglers will go down, but they soon come to the surface to breathe. When they come in contact with the thin film of oil they are unable to breathe, and they are sure to perish at once. Thus it is possible to keep the water in the rain barrel, tank or cistern without mosquitoes multiplying therein. The addition of a little kerosene oil to water that is to be used for a undry purposes will not prove harmful in the least, but on the other hand will be really beneficial. Of course, where water is to be used for drinking by poultry or livestock, the oil should be dipped or drained off before one can expect the animals to use it.

An inspection of the premises where mosquitoes are bad sometimes reveals the facts that they are going in or out of drain pipes or cisterns or other places where there is water, and if these are properly screened it is sufficient to prevent the passage of the mosquitoes, and, consequently, obviates the nuisance.

Often old tin cans, discarded buckets, jars, pitchers, etc., are left on a dump pile, or in some neglected spot where they retain water and serve as breeding places for these annoying pests. A crusade of inspection around the borough will generally result in revealing the presence of the pests in some unexpected places, and this may result in their extermination at an expense of only a few cents for oil or labor. Of course, where there are large swamps to be drained, the expense becomes greater, but the improvement in the value and possibility of the land is such as to justify every effort in this direction.

Damage From Prairie Dogs.

As a detail of its campaign against prairie dogs on the sheep and cattle ranges of the West, the Biological Survey of the Department of Agriculture is using carbon bisulphide in connection with eight tons of poisoned grain for the extermination of the little pests on the ranges of the Coconino National Forest, Arizona.

Generally the Biological Survey works to prevent the extinction of birds and mammals. In the present instance it justifies its war against prairie dogs on the principle of the campaign against the bubonic-plaguer at and squirrel, or against the rabbit which girdles fruit trees.

The damage done by the prairie dog, it is pointed out, affects the stock-raising industry in two ways. First, many acres are laid bare in the neighborhood of prairie dog villages, and the amount of food available for cattle is proportionally reduced. Second, valuable animals, frequently horses, have to be killed after they have broken a leg in a prairie dog hole.

According to the Department's expert the stock industry has unwittingly favored the increase of prairie dogs by killing off coyotes that prey upon stock but are also natural enemies of the prairie dogs.

Last year on the Cochetopa National Forest of Colorade fifteen tons of poisoned oats freed some 26 000 acres of grazing from prairie dogs. On the Pike National Forest, in the same State, seven tons of oats were used to clear 60,000 acres. This year five or six tons of the poisoned grain only was used on the Cochetopa and three tons sufficed for the Pike.

It is estimated that on all the National Forests about 278,000 acres, which had been rendered worthless for grazing purposes by prairie dogs, have been restored to their former usefulness. Since it takes on the average 40 acres to support one cow, or eight sheep, this means a gain in the carrying capacity of the range sufficient to run 6,950 cattle or 56,600 sheep.

In 1908 the government began to carry out this campaign, and in 1911 worked on a large scale; it was so successful that in 1912 the quantity of poison put out was doubled. This year's campaign is one of cleaning up the areas where there was almost complete extermination in 1912.

IT'S A MISTAKE

Made By Many Bellefonte Residents.

Many people in a misguided effort to get rid of kidney backache, rely on plasters, liniments and other makeshifts. The right treatment is kidney treatment and a remarkably recommended kidney medicine is Doan's Kidney Pills. Bellefonte is no exception.

The proof is at your very door. The following is an experience typical of the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Bellefonte.

Mrs. B. N. Deitrich, 391 East Bishop St., Bellefonte, Pa., says: "I know that Doan's Kidney Pills are a good remedy for kidney disorders and I do not hesitate one moment in confirming the public statement I gave praising them in October 1907. One of my family complained a great deal of backace and headaches and I had heard so much about Doan's Kidney Pills that I procured a supply at Green's Pharmacy Co. They made a complete cure.

Appealed Keeler Case.

Attorney A. M. Liveright, acting for the family of John O. Keeler has made application to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court for a reversal of the finding of the lower court and a new trial for Keeler who is under sentence of death for the shooting of Joseph W. Roessner, at Clearfield.

The preliminary notice in the appeal was served on District Attorney Kelley after the refusal for the second time of the Pardon Board to commute Keeler's sentence to life imprisonment.

The appeal is returnable the first Monday of July, but as the Supreme Court does not generally hear argument during the heated months of July, August and September the case will not likely be heard before the October sitting of the Court, with a decision some time later, although being a criminal case it has precedence over civil actions and will likely be disposed of within 30 days after being argued.

Mrs. Annie Sharer Dead.

Mrs. Annie Sharer, wife of Henry Sharer died at Bald Eagle, Thursday June 26th, aged about 60 years. She had been ailing about three weeks from a complication of diseases, principally rheumatism and dropsy. Besides her husband she leaves one daughter, Mrs. Viola Fetters, who resides at the parental home.

Deceased, whose maiden name was Annie Weaver, was born in Taylor township, Centre county, and had resided in that vicinity all her life. She was a member of the United Brethren church.

Funeral Saturday June 28th, at 10 a. m. service at the Bald Eagle M. E. church. Interment was made in the cemetery at that place.

Be Careful When You Laugh.

Few people know what dangers lurk in excessive laughter. When we laugh our regular breathing is changed, coming in quick, short respirations because the throat muscles are contracted. It is for this reason that, when laughing very heartily at some good joke, we have often to gasp for breath. At times we are obliged to hold our sides on account of the pain a hearty laugh causes us, owing to the partial suffocation of the lungs through the cutting off of their proper air supply. Every muscle in the body becomes contracted during a continued fit of laughter. Often the blood vessels in the face become congested, causing it to turn red and even purple. Should this congestion continue for any length of time apoplexy resulting in death might well occur. It is better in these circumstances to laugh until we cry, for the shedding of tears relieves the congestion of the brain. Tears caused by grief do good in the same way, and that is now, after a great sorrow, many people have been saved from brain congestion and madness by the timely shedding of a few tears.—London Tit-Bits.

A Conservative Scotch Beadle.

Before he went to Glasgow Dr. Story was for many years minister of Roseneath, and his old beadle was often sorely perplexed by his "innovations"—standing to sing, kneeling at prayer and various other "seemly alterations." His method of objecting to the changes "was to enter the vestry at the close of the service, firmly clasping the big pulpit Bible and then to lay it heavily upon the table, saying, 'I'm dune wi' ye noo, I'm fair dune wi' ye; I canna thole it ony langer. I hae carriet the Bible for thretty years, but I canna cairry it ony langer; I'm fair dune wi' ye.'" Dr. Story would reply, "Hoot, toot, John; you'll think better of that." "Na, na, sir, I canna thole you. I'll cairry the buiks nae langer; I'm dune wi' ye." But the beadle thought better of it, and remained with Dr. Story "as his sure and trusty henchman" till the end of his life.—Westminster Gazette.

Death, Expert Mechanic.

"It is," writes Wilhelm Lamszus in "The Human Slaughter House," "as though Death had scrapped his scythe for old iron, as if nowadays he had graduated as expert mechanic. They have ceased to mow corn by hand nowadays. By this time of day even the sheaves are gathered up by machinery. And so they will have to shovel our millions of bodies underground with burying machines."

As to falling in battle: "Once it was a knightly death, an honorable soldier's death; now it is death by machinery. That is what is sticking in my gullet. We are being hustled from life to death by experts, by mechanicians. And, just as they turn out buttons and pins by wholesale methods of production, so they are now turning out the crippled and the dead by machinery."

Adventures In a Kilt.

A Scotch military official has just finished an imperial tour in a kilt. He walked through India, Ceylon, Australia and New Zealand, covering over 50,000 miles, says the London Mail.

"The highlander's garb," he says, "attracted a surprising amount of attention. At Taranto, in Italy, I was arrested for doing an impromptu highland fling in the street. In Ceylon I came near to being murdered at a religious festival, for people took me for a devil. In New Zealand a Maori chief offered me a native bride in exchange for the costume. My kilt was certainly a nuisance sometimes. The sun in Australia is so powerful that I spent much money on eau de cologne with which to bathe my exposed knees in an attempt to keep off mosquitoes."

Explaining the Needle.

A typesetter in a printing house became very adroit in explaining the large number of misprints for which he was responsible. Even when he changed his work and became a waiter in a restaurant, says the Berlin Echo, his skill did not forsake him. One day he had served a guest with a plate of soup and was turning away when he was called back sharply.

"This is an outrage!" cried the indignant diner. "I find a needle in my soup! What does this mean?"

"Just a misprint, sir," explained the former typesetter. "It should have been a noodle."

Partly Correct.

KILLED ON RAILROADS

Average of Fourteen Deaths Daily Shown by Statistics.

On the doctrine of averages, fourteen people will be killed by American railroads tomorrow. An average of fourteen people, trespassers on railroad property in violation of the law, are killed in this country every day. Of all the 10,446 people killed on American railway property in 1912, 6,449—more than half—were trespassers.

But it is a mistaken idea that all trespassers are tramps; so, to find out really the class of people who trespass on railroad property in violation of the law, and in the face of probable death, the Pennsylvania Railroad conducted an exhaustive investigation of every case where a trespasser was killed or injured last year. The records show that only about one-half of the 267 trespassers killed and the 276 injured on the Lines East of Pittsburgh were classed as "unidentified, mostly tramps." The others were useful citizens.

All trespassers' deaths which occur on the Pennsylvania Railroad are classified in the Interstate Commerce Commission reports as "killed in railway accidents."

Among the 267 who lost their lives while trespassing on Pennsylvania Railroad property were blacksmiths, farmers, carpenters, a cemetery sexton, clerks, a coal dealer, employes of other railroads, glass workers, laborers, a mail carrier, miners, a slack wire performer, a sailor, steel workers, students, a superintendent of a gas well, a soldier, and others from probably a dozen more vocations.

While only figures for the Pennsylvania Lines East of Pittsburgh have been analyzed, complete returns from every one of the roads of the system show that 490 trespassers were killed in 1912. The System's reports for the last thirteen years show 9,013 trespassers killed and 8,977 injured.

The figures are pointed to as emphasizing the contention of the railroads that laws should be enacted providing substantial punishment for persons trespassing on the private right of way of any railroad. The renewed and diligent efforts the Pennsylvania Railroad is making to stop trespassing will be measurably influential, the Management believes, in arousing the public to a realization that in accidents to trespassers it is the individual who loses his life, than which there can be no greater sacrifice. Society loses the individual.

The loss to the Nation in the money value of human lives sacrificed in trespassing is most serious. It is a constant and continuing drain—one which the railroad, unsupported by active public sentiment, is powerless to stop.

Forest Notes.

The Balkan War has brought about a rise in certain lumber prices in Europe because of the big demand for wood for ammunition boxes.

Dogwood, the principal source of shuttles for use in cotton mills, is growing scarcer year by year, and various substitutes are being tried, but with no great success.

The officials of the Yosemite National Park are cooperating with the forest officers of the Stanislaus and Sierra national forests for fire prevention and control in both the park and the forests.

Experiments with a tree planting machine at the Utah Agricultural Experiment Station indicate that it may be used to advantage in reforesting old burned areas on the national forests.

The leading forest schools of the country not only have their own forest tracts for continuous experiments, but give their students actual experience in the woods by having them take part in big lumbering operations.

Mr. Battis, or Uriah Heep?

AT THE 1913 CHAUTAUQUA.

"Life Portrayals" is the entertainment in which Mr. Battis shows the wondering crowd how many complete personalities one mortal may have. One moment this impersonator is fawning, silly-faced Uriah from "David Copperfield," clothes, language and all! The next moment he is Nell's grandfather from "The Old Curiosity Shop," quavering pathetic speeches about his little girl. A dozen or more characters talk to us as real as life in the two hours, for Mr. Battis is a master of interpretation. The most novel part of the program is the rapid changing by Mr. Battis of his make-up, paint, wigs and costumes in plain sight of his vastly amused and delighted audience.

FUN FOR HOLIDAY

Departure From the Usual Fourth of July Dinner.

PATRIOTIC OUTDOOR MEAL.

The Tricolor Scheme Carried Out In the Decorations and Edibles Something Unique In a Red, White and Blue Floral Centerpiece.

Drifting away from the stereotyped Independence day table, with its flags, let us consider one which was very pretty, inexpensive and out of the ordinary, where everything—decorations, favors and sweets—was the work of the hostess and the patriotic spirit was strongly evinced by dainty red, white and blue in various ways, says Good Housekeeping Magazine. It was a family dinner, given on the top of a mountain, and more miles were between her and good things than the lady and the lemon Gail Hamilton told of.

So much had been done with flags and firecracker favors that she determined to be patriotic in a different way. In the center of the table was a low glass dish filled with blue ragged sailors massed in thickly; around the base was a close wreath of snowy white geranium heads, and two inches outside of it was a second wreath formed of dark red geraniums laid on the leaves of the plant, the stems all turned in so as to make a green scalloped edge for the red clusters to lie on. Of course the stems were all cut from the flowers to enable them to lie close and flat to the table.

Two candlesticks of pure white glass at each end of the table held colored candles, red at one end and blue at the other. The shades were pure white, and with a sharp pointed knife the hostess had cut tiny stars out of the paper and lined them with white tissue paper, through which the light shone brightly.

There were two plates of little iced cakes, all white, but one plate was an old india blue, and the other Japanese, with a deep red border. There were dishes of dainty homemade candies, and at each plate was a favor—little bags of silk, filled with bonbons, for the ladies and shaving papers and penwipers for the gentlemen—so arranged that the color scheme of red, white and blue was followed and yet was not in evidence. The dinner was also patriotic. Cream of potato soup was of course white; lobster served in its own shell was red, and the entree, chicken creamed and browned, was served in blue ramekins. Roast beef, mashed potatoes and stuffed eggplant in its own bluish skin helped to carry out the idea. The salad was tomato jelly served with white heads of lettuce. The dessert was quite an achievement. Between two platters were placed red, white and blue flowers, so that the stems went between the dishes and only the blossoms showed. On top were balls of rich vanilla ice cream and lemon ice. Coffee was served on the piazza, and there the children received the chocolate firecrackers they longed for. The favors illustrated are quite the newest thing in Fourth of July table souvenirs.

The Vogue of Sashes.

The vogue for sashes is pronounced, and the value of these, either neutral tinted or black, introduced as a desired note of contrast, is great. Some of the newest sashes are by no means simple of construction, for as many as four or five different colors are seen in one sash, as, for example, gold tissue for the center piped on either side with rose colored satin. This again is outlined with a narrow band of black satin and beyond this a still narrower one of emerald green, while the ends are embroidered with silks and beads, introducing the colors named.

For Lingerie Waists.

Make buttonholes on both sides of a lingerie waist, but sew the buttons on a white tape and button them to the button side. When the waist goes to the laundress remove the buttons. The same tape of buttons can be used on several waists.

CAN YOU SWIM?

Every Woman Should Be Able to Teach Her Children to Swim.

It ought to be every woman's ambition when summer comes not only to learn to swim herself, but to see that her children learn to swim and so lessen the possibility of accidents from drowning in her own family. No one who does not know how to swim ought to get into a canoe or rowboat, and if she does perchance risk her life in a launch she ought first to think of the responsibility her lack of knowledge of swimming puts on her companions.

Children should not be forcibly thrown into the water. If they naturally fear it their fear should be overcome in some way. Sometimes an exhibition of swimming on the part of a strong man will inspire them with a desire to learn the art. Sometimes a little bribing will help gain the desired result. Stories of great swimmers, too, help inspire children with a wish to learn to swim well. Cardinal Merry del Val is a good swimmer and once rescued some one from drowning; Prince Leopold of Bavaria is a royal patron of the sport; Jack London, the story writer, can swim as well as he can write, and many other famous men have had interesting experiences while they were swimming.

A little girl can often have her interest in swimming stimulated if her swimming costume is attractive. For instance, a bright cap of waterproof silk or one of the red, blue or green rubber caps frilled about the face, with garters of frilled rubber to match, might prove attractive to a little girl who is timid about entering the water. The thought of wearing the pretty cap would keep her mind occupied so that she would forget her natural dislike of the water. After a few lessons almost every one becomes enthusiastic about learning to swim. It is the first few lessons that are difficult, and it is during these that a child sometimes needs coaxing.

IT'S VERY THRIFTY

To Know How to Utilize Leftover Envelopes.

Every woman who buys her stationery by the box or in even quantities of paper and envelopes finds that when her supply of paper is exhausted she still has on hand anywhere from two to six packages of envelopes. This is, of course, due to the fact that her letters are usually two or three sheets in length, while only one envelope is used.

These extra envelopes can be utilized by transforming them into the correspondence cards so popular nowadays. Trim off one-sixteenth of an inch from each edge of the envelope, throwing away the back and flap. The trimming can be done with the scissors if wielded by a steady hand, but a mechanical trimmer such as photographers use will make a neater job. A printer will do it for almost nothing. The resulting "card" will be just enough smaller than the envelope to fit into it easily, and if the paper is a good heavy quality the card really looks very well.

If you have enough of these leftover envelopes to warrant the trouble, the improvised correspondence cards may be imprinted with the house address or the monogram used on your regular stationery. They serve nicely for informal notes, hasty messages, mail orders, and so on.

When Milady Sews.

Designed especially for outdoor use is this pretty sewing stand of wicker, which may be painted any color to match the porch furnishings.

Every woman who has had experience in mending on the veranda or under the trees knows how invaluable it is to have one's sewing materials stowed away in a safe place. The stand in the cut meets all these requirements.

To Keep Ice Cream Firm Several Hours

If you want to keep ice cream cold for several hours after it is packed and if the ice seems to be melting line a zinc or aluminium receptacle with newspapers, pour in the ice and salt, put the mold of ice cream, wrapped well in waxed paper, in the ice and salt and cover well with newspapers. Ice cream packed in this way will keep in good condition for an hour or two longer than that packed in a wooden pail.

Turkish Draperies.

The new skirts are full in a most peculiar way. The fullness is around the body, while the effect is kept narrow around the foot. It would seem almost as if they had Turkish trousers in mind.

THE TWO BARONS.

They Had a Trying Time In the Royal Court of Bulgaria.

Till he left the royal court of Bulgaria in disgrace some time ago old Baron Eckdorfstein, the princes' over governor, gave the royal children more fun than anybody. He was a rigid fidgety old Prussian, always complaining. In the early part of last year under the plea that his neighbor, Baron Bernsdorff, snored so loud that he could not sleep, he changed his rooms from the wing to the main body of the palace, much to the disgust of the princes who determined to get rid of him.

They soon hit on a plan. His new quarters were so far from the telephone that he had to pass many corridors and cross a large hall to get to it. One morning he got so urgent a call that he hastened out in his pajamas. On his way back he found the way stopped. Each corridor and stairway held a sentry, who solemnly declared his royal highness the crown prince had given orders that nobody was to pass.

The princes themselves guarded two exits, and the poor old baron spent an awful quarter of an hour rushing wildly about the large hall and dodging behind pillars when a minister passed through on his way to the king. The suit, hearing roars of laughter, came to look and laugh.

The joke worked so well that the baron petitioned the king to go back to his old quarters that very day. But he grew crustier and crustier. The crisis was reached when, furious that a reception was going on in the palace when he wanted to sleep, he rose, locked all the dressing room doors and took the keys to his room. Some of the household gave him a good shaking. The king heard of it and sent him off on unlimited leave.

In the meantime Baron Bernsdorff, whom Eckdorfstein had got in disgrace by the reports of his outrageous snoring, had had no summons to go to the king for weeks and weeks and was getting quite uneasy, as the man who does not enjoy royal conversation frequently soon loses prestige at court. But at last a gendarme came and told him he was not to stir from his rooms that day, as the king might want him.

Bernsdorff waited and waited. At last, three weeks later, somebody mentioned his name before the king, who exclaimed, "Good heaven, I told him to wait in for me three weeks ago!" He sent and found the poor old Prussian still waiting. Through three weeks of glorious Balkan spring weather he had not dared leave his rooms.—Harper's.

Cheerfulness.

We ought to be as cheerful as we can if only because to be happy ourselves is a most effectual contribution to the happiness of others.—Lord Avebury.

Trapping a Dean.

Mr. Frederic Harrison tells the following story of Dr. Gaisford, once dean of Christ Church college, Oxford, a typical "head" of the old school, whose autocratic disposition did not escape the notice of his pupils. A student of the house, in spite of formal orders of the tutors that no undergraduate should have leave to attend the Derby, succeeded in getting it by telling Dr. Gaisford that his tutor had declared that not even the dean himself could break the college rule. "What!" said the dean. "They tell you I cannot give leave? I give you leave, sir—and report this order to your tutor!"

Didn't Want the Landscape.

Thomas J. Pence, who pulled off a prize piece of work in managing President Wilson's campaign publicity work, dropped into a restaurant in Washington one evening and ordered a watercress sandwich.

The waiter set it before him, the slices of bread being cut very thick and the supply of watercress enor mous. Pence gazed on the sandwich in sadness and silence for at least five minutes.

It Wasn't Like Sargent After All.

Once when John S. Sargent, the famous painter, was at a banquet a young lady whom he knew very well said to him, "Oh, Mr. Sargent, I saw your latest painting and kissed it because it was so much like you."

"And did it kiss you in return?"

"Why, no."

"Then," said Mr. Sargent, "it was not like me."

Time to Fire Him.

A taxicab driver attempting to cross Madison avenue near Madison Square Garden while the big circus was playing there ran directly into the rear end of one of Barnum & Bailey's elephants. The big animal was not half as much jarred as the machine, but he showed his displeasure by sitting down on the hood, crushing the engine and front wheels into a mass of wreckage.

"AN ELEPHANT SAT ON THE HOOD."

The machine was dragged to its garage, and there the unlucky chauffeur was called on the carpet by the superintendent.

"How did this accident occur?" he demanded.

"Why, an elephant sat on the hood," explained the chauffeur.

"An elephant sat on the hood, did he?" repeated the superintendent. "Murphy, I've known that you've been drinking pretty hard for the past three weeks, but I didn't think you were that bad. If I had I would have fired you long ago. An elephant sat on the hood, did he? Well, you're fired!"—New York World.

Your Ideals.

Have we not all amid life's petty strife
Some pure ideal of noble life
That once seemed possible? Did we not hear
The flutter of its wings and feel it near
And just within our reach? It was, and yet
We lost it in this daily jar and fret
And now live idle in a vague regret.
But still our place is kept, and it will wait,
Ready for us to fill it, soon or late.
No star is ever lost we once have seen.
We always may be what we might have been.

—Adelaide A. Procter.

He Corrected Clay.

Hanna Rion, author of "Let's Make a Flower Garden," tells the following story which she got from her father, who was a protege of John C. Calhoun:

Mr. Clay was visiting Fort Hill, the Calhoun home, and during a breakfast he and Mr. Calhoun as usual began a heated argument on one of the thousand points which they did not agree upon. Mr. Clay became so engrossed he paid but small attention to the meal, and when the negro butler passed the biscuits Clay harpooned one with his fork. The old butler was startled, but he silently disappeared into the kitchen to reappear with a plate of steaming waffles. Mr. Clay, more excited over his argument than ever, snatched a waffle with his fingers. This was too much. The old negro squared himself and, interrupting an argument which might have changed history, said: "No, boss, dat won't do at all. De fingers for de biscuits and de fork for de waffles."

HARPOONED ONE WITH HIS FORK.

A Refined Looking Domestic.

One day Miss Helen Taft was met by two tourists as she left the White House grounds. With that charming and inexplicable gift for garrulity which tourists develop, they stopped her and, not knowing that she was the president's daughter, asked her a lot of questions about the White House. Miss Taft submitted and pointed out all the various interesting things about the grounds, where the apartments of the president and his family were situated and other intimate details.

"You seem to know a lot about it, my dear," said one of the women.

"Oh," replied Miss Taft laughingly, "you see I am one of the assistants to the chief cook."

As she walked away she heard one of the tourists declare:

"Quite refined looking for a domestic."—Popular Magazine.

Cutting Out the Liver.

Herbert Corey, the champion long distance anecdote teller of the world, says that where he came from in Ohio there was a stranded, hungry race track gambler who struck town and found the friend of his boyhood running a short order restaurant, says the Saturday Evening Post. The restaurant man made his old comrade welcome and at first fed him copiously, but after a week or so grew weary of so unprofitable a guest and decided to give the wayfarer a gentle hint.

So he instructed the waiters to give him only liver to eat, liver being the cheapest thing on the bill of fare. The race track man had liver for breakfast, dinner and supper—just liver and nothing but liver. He lived on liver nine days. Then on the morning of the tenth he found a twenty dollar bill on the street.

He made hotfoot for the most pretentious cafe in the place. The menu was printed in French. He beckoned the waiter to him.

"Have you got liver here?" he asked.

"This is liver," said the waiter, pointing to a line on the card.

The gambler laid a thumb over it firmly.

"Now, then," he said, "bring me $10 worth each way from liver!"

WALKED INTO THE TRAP.

It Was a Tantalizing Scheme, and It Unmasked the Pretender.

There are many stories extant, amusing as well as instructive, of the dodges resorted to by British soldiers who wish to get "invalided" home from an undesirable station. There is the case of the professed deaf and dumb man. The patient, who appeared suddenly and unaccountably to have gone deaf and dumb, when asked a question, would stare straight to his front in stony silence.

The dumb man was removed to the hospital for treatment, and upon his diet sheet each morning was written a tempting array of hospital comforts such as T. Atkins loves—rice pudding, bacon, eggs, milk punch and even beer. This list of luxuries could be studied by all who cared to read. But day after day the medical orderly brought nothing to the poor patient but plain milk. Each morning, in sympathetic voice, the officer inquired of the orderly in front of the patient whether each and every article of diet had been provided. The orderly glibly answered, "Yes, sir!"

"HE'S A LIAR, SIR!"

"Did he get his beer with his dinner, all he wanted of it, and his milk punch before he went to bed?"

And again would come from the orderly a cheerful, "Yes, sir."

At first the poor deaf and dumb man's face would redden, but never a word could he hear or speak. There is, however, a limit to all endurance, and it was for that limit that the officer waited. Fully convinced that the orderly was a thief and a heartless scoundrel and had been bagging the comforts for himself, the patient could stand it no longer.

"He's a liar, sir!" gasped he at last. "I've had naught but milk for a week!"

Result.—Immediate discharge from hospital and a court martial.

Make the Plunge.

To do anything worth while in the world we must not stand shivering on the brink and thinking of the cold and the danger, but jump in and scramble through as well as we can.—Sidney Smith.

No Room For Speeding.

Mr. Atkins was driving over his property with his daughter and a young man whom he was beginning to look upon as a possible and very desirable son-in-law.

The chauffeur, not unnaturally, was inclined to show off the motorcar, but Mr. Atkins himself had higher thoughts. As John, the chauffeur, quickened his speed he leaned over near him and said in a whisper:

"Not so fast, John, not so fast. You make my estate look too small."

Needed a Lawn Mower.

There was but one tonsorial chair in the village barber shop, and it was occupied by a stalwart fellow, evidently a blacksmith. Judging from the stubborn growth of beard, the patron could not have shaved but once a week on an average, for the growth was like a scrubbing brush. The barber made a lather, placed it all over the countenance of the recumbent blacksmith, stropped the razor vigorously and sailed into his work. After he had struggled long and dangerously over his patron he felt constrained to say:

"Ain't I hurtin' you?"

"No," answered the Plutonian gentleman, still with energy.

"I seem to be workin' hard without gettin' there," commented the barber further.

"Oh, just go on," encouraged the blacksmith. "You're doin' all right, for them you ain't cuttin' off you're cripplin' so much I guess they'll never grow again!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

When the Game Was Called.

Casey announced to his wife, Ellen, that he was going to the ball game. All day he was gone. Night came, but no Casey to take his place at the head of the table. Midnight and no Casey. One o'clock—2 o'clock—3 o'clock—no Casey.

As the 6 o'clock whistles began to blow Casey stumbled up the front stairs into the house and awakened his wife by his efforts to negotiate the stairs.

She hopped out of bed and met her better half in the doorway.

"Well?" said Mrs. Casey, determination written on her face.

"Sal-rite, Illin," said Casey weakly. "The game was called on account of daylight."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

HOW TO REPRODUCE OLD PLASTER CAST.

Many women may desire to reproduce an article in plaster. This is not a difficult [illegible] if these directions are followed: The materials required are: Plaster of paris, clay, water, a mixing spoon and a bread board two feet square. When you first attempt it try something simple—half of an apple, for instance. An extra precaution would be to mix a little bluing with the plaster, to distinguish it from the model. Soap the half apple well on the outside. Place it flat side down upon the modeling board and build a mound of softened clay around it.

When this has hardened mix the powdered plaster with water until it is the consistency of pancake batter. Pour this into the mold of clay. When it has hardened separate the mold from the cast. To cast the whole of an object mold one-half at a time, and soap both sides of the inside of the mold thoroughly. Make a hole in the top of the mold, which is formed by the union of the two halves. Through this opening pour the liquid plaster.

When the cast has hardened it may be shellacked or ivorized.

This is extremely interesting. Try it some time and see.

A TIMELY SUGGESTION.

How to Make a Pool For the Water Garden.

Nowadays there are many forms of gardening, but perhaps few are more interesting than the water garden. Most persons have an idea that a water garden is only possible where there is a large amount of room. This is quite a wrong notion. There must be few gardens in which it is not possible to spare a piece of ground about nine feet square, and this is all that is necessary.

The situation is a matter of some importance. In a general way odd corners are to be avoided, and the more open the position the better.

A very good formation for the pool would be that of a rough circle. Six feet is a suitable measurement for the diameter of the pond, which should be dug out in the form of a rough basin. The greatest depth must be in the center of the pool, and the sides should sink fairly abruptly. In a pool of this size it is desirable to have as much deep water as possible, so that there will be good accommodation for water lilies. The deepest part of the pool should not be less than two feet six inches and might be a little more.

After the digging out of the basin one of the first steps is to make sure that the soil is pressed down very firmly in the bottom.

The question of lining the basin now arises. Of course there is no doubt that the ideal way is to spread over the whole of the floor a layer of concrete. This substance is formed by mixing moderate sized stones with cement, and the making of it is not beyond the average amateur. The concrete is spread over the bottom of the basin and should not be less than three inches in thickness.

How to Arrange For Early Breakfast.

Many women are called upon to have early breakfast, and some find it quite a hardship. To relieve this hardship, said an accomplished housekeeper, I have adopted the following plan: Before retiring at night I set my table, prepare the fruit and place it in a cool place, roll my butter balls and put on ice. If I am to have a cooked cereal I put it to soak in a double boiler, which needs only to be put over the fire first thing on coming into the kitchen in the morning; if a cereal only to be crisped I measure it into a pan ready to be run into the oven.

I measure my coffee and put it in the pot ready for the water. If I am to have hot biscuits or waffles or buckwheat cakes I measure the flour and all ingredients and have it ready to mix with the milk, or if I am to have toast I slice the bread ready for the toaster. If I am to have breakfast bacon I have it sliced and ready for the spider, or if there are to be croquettes I mold them and have them ready to be browned. Thus I have my breakfast ready in twenty or twenty-five minutes after entering the kitchen in the morning.

How to Protect Parasols.

The delicately colored silk and linen parasols so popular this summer ought to have cases to keep them dust and spot free when not in use. These covers are very easy to make. The parasol should be measured from the tip to the end of the ribs, and a bag, shaped at the end, should be cut the proper length. The seam may be sewed plainly or with some fancy stitch. Turn over the top and insert a drawing string or sew beading at the top and insert ribbon. An embroidered initial in the center of the bag makes it more attractive.

How to Mend a Hot Water Bottle.

If you find a tiny break in the hot water bag don't throw it away. Apply several coats of liquid court plaster and let each coat dry before applying the next. This will extend the usefulness of the bag, as the court plaster is waterproof and hot water will not melt it.

WASN'T IT FINE?

If Bellefonte's recent Fourth of July was a fair sample of a "safe and sane" celebration, then by all means let there be more such celebrations. To most persons the day's events were a pleasing surprise. Everything was well arranged and admirably executed: The parade was splendid. Everybody was happy and not a single accident occurred to mar the pleasure of the day. To the managers of the day's celebration much praise is due. To each and every person who participated, young and old, let Bellefonte take off its municipal hat and say: "Thank you."

Council in Session.

Borough Council disposed of considerable routine business at the regular meeting on Monday night. The Street Committee recommended that the borough put down an 18-inch retaining wall along Linn Street, at the Rhoads corner. Miss Rebecca N. Rhoads has signified her intention of putting down a concrete sidewalk in front of her residence. Professor J. R. Hughes appeared before Council with a request that the borough vacate the old alley extending between Bishop and Pine Streets. He has acquired the property abutting on both sides of the alley. If Council grants the request it is his intention to construct a driveway at that point leading into the Academy campus. Council was in doubt as to its power to vacate the alley without some court proceedings and the matter was referred to the borough solicitor for investigation. Councilman Sheffer asked permission for Morris & Sheffer to place hitching posts in front of their store in the Eagle Block. The necessity of setting back the street curb to the old location was discussed in this connection and the matter was finally referred to the Street Committee. Before adjourning Council directed the preparation of a number of notes to take care of notes maturing.

Do You Have a Son?

Would you like your son to study agriculture, manual training and book-keeping, and at the same time fit himself to teach? Do you know that if he is over seventeen years of age he is entitled to $60.00 per year from the State to pay his tuition in a Normal School? Spicher—Osmer.

Boyd A. Spicher, of Pleasant Gap, and Miss Lulu M. Osmer, of this place, surprised their many friends by quietly slipping away in the former's automobile to Lock Haven, on the evening of the Fourth of July, where at 8 o'clock, they were united in holy bonds of wedlock by Rev. Hoover, the Lutheran minister in that city. On Saturday, Mrs. Spicker quietly resumed her duties as a clerk in Gilliam's store, and it was not until Monday, that the news became public that this happy event had occurred. Mr. Spicher is a mail carried on one of the rural routes and resides at Pleasant Gap, where he already has a pleasant home provided for his bride. Mrs. Spicher is a daughter of Charles Osmer, of Bush Addition, and is a very pretty and attractive young lady. We extend our congratulations and best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Spicher.

Two Strenuous Lives.

Clovis Hughes, the French journalist, poet and duelist, filled his fifty-five years of life with sufficient excitement to make him worthy of special mention. One of his claims to distinction was that he had engaged in a French duel which resulted fatally—for the other man. He was a tempestuous radical and was once suspended from the chamber of deputies for insulting remarks to the president, which did not at all curb him. He wrote a number of novels, poems and plays in which he sought to spread socialistic propaganda, and he wrote a pretentious five act drama in verse called "Le Sommeil de Danton" ("The Sleep of Danton"), which was produced at the Opera Comique. His wife contributed her share of excitement by killing a public official in the palace of justice because of an alleged insult. Before she was tried she wrote and acted "La Vegeance de Mme. Clovis Hughes." The play depicted her sensational act and represented her as triumphantly exonerated by the court. When her trial came the court did as predicted.

Gloves.

The origin of gloves is very ancient. Some authorities assert that they were known in Bible times, from references made to "shoes" which were thought to be identical with gloves. The first clear account of gloves comes, however, from Xenophon. This writer speaks of the Persians wearing gloves on their hands to protect them from the cold. Homer describes Laertes working in his garden with gloves upon his hands to protect them from the thorns, and Varro mentions this apparel as being worn by the Romans. Gloves have been tokens of solemn and important things from the ninth century. They were adopted as a rite of the church, and later the transferring of lands or titles was always attended with the presentation of gloves. In the eleventh century the method of challenging to single combat by throwing down a glove was instituted, and this custom still remains in some countries.

Pierpont Morgan's Fairy Palace.

Pierpont Morgan's wonderful house in Prince's Gate differed little on the outside from its neighbors, merely two houses rolled into one, but its interior suggested nothing so much as the fairy palace of Aladdin. In the hall a spring was pressed and part of one of the walls "fell away" in the approved style. You walked down into a basement, which at first sight resembled nothing so much as one of the lower decks on a large liner. Ranged along the walls were what appeared to be a number of safes, but they were really doors opening into small rooms, into each of which a particular portion of Mr. Morgan's collection had been brought. There were rooms for English silver, for porcelain and for half a dozen other objets d'art. No one who was ever fortunate enough to be shown round by Mr. Morgan himself can forget the experience.—London Bystander

Mercury Poisoning.

"I would suggest," says a doctor, "that, whenever persons are found to have swallowed bichloride of mercury, several eggs be forced down their throats. The albumen in the eggs will form a chemical compound with the mercury, which will be insoluble. Then the poison will pass out through the intestines or be vomited by the victim. It is always a good thing to pump out the stomach first or to induce vomiting. Many times it is necessary to act quickly if the life of the person is to be saved, and it takes time for a physician to arrive on the scene. Bichloride of mercury will not produce a painless death. It is a poison that paralyzes the liver. It eats through the walls of the stomach, and the victim generally dies in great agony." — Des Moines Register and Leader.

Witch Burning.

There are countries in which the execution of women as witches is only a thing of yesterday. The last instance of witch burning occurred as recently as 1888 in Peru, and in other parts of South America cases continued to occur until well into the second half of the nineteenth century. England's own last conviction for witchcraft took place at Hertford in 1712, and Scotland condemned a witch ten years later, while Spain and Germany retained a judicial belief in witches and the justice of killing them until 1782 and 1796.

Silence Preferred.

J. M. Barrie, the novelist, has said that one of the "most enjoyable social functions" he ever attended was a dinner at which he turned to his neighbor and asked, "Do you converse?" "No; I don't," replied his neighbor. "Nor do I," said Mr. Barrie, and they did not.—London Mail.

Not His Death Warrant.

A police magistrate in Paris had a queer experience not long ago which began with an interview with an hysterical woman. She rushed into his office, past the attendant and, interrupting a conversation, threw a crumpled letter on the officer's desk and with pathetic gesture wailed: "Save him! Save him!"

The official thought he had an insane person before him, but picked up the paper, which looked like a letter. It began in letters larger than the body of the document: "You must die! Nothing will save you! You must die!"

"He has always been a good man, and the little we owe we can pay at any time," the woman said between sobs, "and now there is a conspiracy against him."

While she was protesting the magistrate read the letter and, handing it back, said: "Go home to your family—read the rest of this letter. It is a life insurance advertisement."

The woman then told the magistrate she could not read, that a neighbor had read for her, and so many people were being killed, and she was so happy.

Glass Cutting.

The layman who is introduced to the mysteries of cutting glass for the first time is amazed at the amount of work that the workman does entirely by his eye. The first stage of the bowl which is to be cut finds it in a perfectly plain condition, not a scratch upon it and only a half dozen or more marks in red chalk, which mean absolutely nothing to the unpracticed eye. But to the workman they mean the whole pattern. Perhaps the dish is a salad bowl. The marks in chalk will run from the edge, five intervals apart, down to the center of the bowl at the bottom. In one of the divisions of the bowl thus marked there may be a little further marking in the shape perhaps of a diamond. This indicates the pattern into which the bowl is to be cut, and it will be repeated in each of the five divisions. All the intricacies of the design the workman has in his head, and they develop on the glass in a way which seems to the looker on absolutely marvelous.—New York Times.

A Fair Compromise.

A partner in one of the theatrical producing firms of the city of New York had occasion to hire an actor to play a small part in a drama he was putting out. A rather well known actor, who values himself and his art with a proper appreciation, applied for the place.

"You play a full blood Sioux Indian," explained the manager. "The salary is $50 a week."

"My dear boy," said the actor in a pained tone, "I've never worked for less than $100. A hundred dollars is my regular price."

"Fifty dollars!" said the manager calmly. "Take it or leave it." The actor thought it over a minute.

"I'll take it," he said, "but I can't play a full blood Indian for $50. I'll play him as a half breed!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Find Something New.

In 1644 the possibilities of the submarine were first propounded, while from the very earliest times men have conceived the idea of flying with wings like birds. There is no reason whatever to doubt the fact that Archytas of Tarentum, about 394 years before the Christian era, constructed an automaton pigeon that would fly. Turning to other latter day inventions, as they are generally regarded, it might be mentioned that switchback railways were constructed more than a hundred years ago, and looping the loop was a sensation in Paris in 1833, while roller skating, which came up as a new invention about forty years ago, was being indulged in by our forefathers as far back as 1829.

The Yolk of an Egg.

After the fast of Lent medieval custom insisted that an egg should be eaten on Easter day. According to the London Lancet, this rule was based on sound medical principles, for the only substance in the yolk is lecithin, and lecithin is a favorite drug with doctors who have patients suffering from nervous disorders. The quantity of the drug administered at a time corresponds almost exactly with the quantity found in a normal new laid egg.

MRS. G. W. ATHERTON DEAD.

Was Widow of Former President of Pennsylvania State College.

Mrs. Frances W. Atherton, widow of the late G. W. Atherton, for a long time president of The Pennsylvania State College, and for years a resident of that place, died at one o'clock Tuesday morning at State College after an extended illness. Funeral services will be held at State College today at four o'clock, conducted by her pastor, Rev. Samuel Martin, assisted by the college chaplain, Rev. Robert R. R. Reed. Interment will be made at Pine Hall cemetry.

Frances Washburn Atherton was born at Plympton, Massachusetts, May 28th, 1836. This little New England village, twelve miles from Plymouth was full of traditional forces which make for character. Freedom and independence were imbibed with the very air. Mrs. Atherton attended the district school, and later the normal school at Bridgewater, Massachusetts in preparation for teaching. For nine years the school room claimed her energies, eight years of which were in the schools of New Haven, Connecticut. Here she met President Atherton, then a student of Yale University, and in love and eternal friendship their lives were united. They were married in 1863. Eight children blessed the union, only three of whom are living: Charles M., engaged in Settlement Work in New York City; Harriet C., the wife of Albert F. Buckhout of South Hadley, Massachusetts; and Helen H., the wife of Professor Charles E. Govier of State College. The eldest son, Frank, who was rarely gifted in music, died two years ago. His devoted wife remained to aid in lifting the burdens of Mrs. Atherton, and to share the joys of her companionship.

Mrs. Atherton early united with the Congregational Church, and wherever she lived, she was indentified with religious work. She was not sectarian, but deeply religious, and her hand was outstretched to aid all Christian bodies. She lived religion and religion lived in her life. It shone upon her face, in a kindly disposition, in the very hand outstretched in greeting. In the college chapel service and in the church, she was ever faithful. In work for others, in village improvement, in social life, in establishing home life and friendly relations in our college community, Mrs. Atherton was a leader. She possessed those qualities of home likeness, of spontaneous helpfulness, of kindly charity, which have been the crown and ornament of her life.

Under Mrs. Atherton's inspiration the Woman's Club of State College was organized in 1893. For thirteen years she was President of the Club. She was active in its work, its very life and soul. Her home was its favorite, and almost constant meeting place. In 1906, she was made honorary President, an office created for her, and although ill health constrained her to less active work in the club, she was vitally interested to the end.

Tributes, no pen need seek, they are spontaneous on every lip, they glisten in the eye, tremble in the hand. Yet when we seek to give expression to our common tribute, words like these voice our thoughts. First: Mrs. Atherton's life was a life of sunshine. She spread happiness by a subtle contagion upon all with whom she came in contact. You felt the welcome, the hearty, friendly sympathy the moment you indentified yourself with State College. Mrs. Atherton was our college Mother, and student and teacher felt the bond of interest which she inspired. She was a natural hostess. Her strength by some magic of inner life always sufficed to bring happiness and cheer to every guest. She ministered liberally. She served much. She loved much. The second sentiment, which every heart would lay as a tribute is that of sacrifice. Noble character is made by sacrifice, and Mrs. Atherton was noble. Back of every great man, back of his good deeds, is the loving, sacraficing heart of a good woman. Here in the home, in the acting rounds, in bearing the burden of obscurity that loved ones may win public laurels, here is the unwritten history of devotion, of heroism, of faith. The Pennsylvania State College, if ever its real history is written, will bear eloquent witness to the sacrificing devotion of this life a sacrifice so freely made that we who saw it, know it to have been, with pleasure, done.

Third, Mrs. Atherton's life calls for a tribute of service. She served even when she led—yea, she led because she served. State College of thirty years ago was in infant clothes. It demanded more in ministry and care than in its young and independent manhood of today. There was less with which to do of material comforts and social opportunities. To make "Bricks without straw" was the common task to college and town. The services of love transforms the commonplace, and Mrs. Atherton's life of service helped to make of State College a spiritual habitation, the abode of Sunshine, Sacrifice and Service.

Many a heart dwelling upon the secret of this life will breathe the prayer: Lord, give me a soul content to raise the tasks of life into the realm of sunshine, sacrifice and service.

Mrs. Daniel Snyder Dead.

Mrs. Mary Anna Davis Morgan Snyder, wife of Daniel Snyder, died at her late home in Bellefonte at 9:30 o'clock on Thursday morning of last week, her death being the culmination of an illness extending over a period of six months. Her disease was diagnosed as cancer of the liver. Funeral services were held on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. Interment was made in the Catholic cemetery. Deceased was born in Wales on September 10, 1863. When but eight years of age she removed to Bellefonte and made this place her home to the time of her death. A devout Christian woman she derived her greatest pleasure in helping others and by all who knew her intimately her death is sincerely mourned. Surviving are her husband and three children: Estella L., wife of Edward Hill; Donald M. and Miss Jennie Morgan Snyder. These sisters and brothers also survive: Catharine, wife of Charles Pyle, and David Morgan, of Atlantic City; Rebecca, wife of Sidney Barlett, of Altoona, and Jennie, Louise and Thomas, all of Bellefonte.

Samuel Bryan Dead.

Samuel Bryan, an aged and well known Centre Countian and veteran of the Civil war, died at 5 o'clock yesterday morning at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Adam Shroyer, at Milesburg. He had been ill about two weeks. Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock from the Shroyer home. Interment will be made at Curtin. Had he lived until October 15th, next, he would have been 78 years old. He spent the greater part of his life at Curtin, more recently making his home at Milesburg. During the Civil war he served with bravery and distinction in defense of the flag, enlisting September 1, 1862, with Company B, 148th Regiment, and being mustered out June 1, 1865. Surviving to mourn his passing away are these children: Mrs. Lucy MCox, of Tyrone; Mrs. Blanche Crossmyre, of Cleveland, Ohio; Mrs. Adam Shroyer, of Milesburg; Samuel and Elber Bryan, of Bellefonte, and Edward Bryan, of Curtin. Deceased was a brother of Roland Bryan, of Curtin; James Bryan, of Milesburg, and Mrs. Robert Saylor, of Bellefonte.

Mrs. Sue Woomer Dead.

Mrs. Sue Woomer, widow of David Woomer, formerly of Port Matilda, died on Saturday evening, June 28, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Harry Patterson, in Tyrone, aged 74 years. She had been a life long member of the M. E. church.

Surviving her are the following sons and daughters: St. Clair Woomer and L. A. Woomer, of Altoona; Mrs. Sanford Lewis, of Clearfield; Warren Woomer, of Bald Eagle; Mrs. Harry Patterson, of Tyrone, and Mrs. Isaiah Nearhoof of Vail. She also leaves three sisters and one brother, viz: Mrs. Thomas Bennett and Miss Nancy Woodring, of Port Matilda; Mrs. Henry Woomer, of Bald Eagle, and Daniel W. Woodring of Bellefonte.

Mrs. A. F. Weaver Dead.

Mrs. Mary Weaver, wife of Rev. A. F. Weaver, pastor of the Bellefonte United Evangelical church, died at 9.30 o'clock Tuesday morning at the Bellefonte hospital following an illness of four weeks. Her death was due to a complication of conditions resulting from a second operation. A brief funeral service will be held from the local United Evangelical church today at 10 o'clock. The regular services will be held tomorrow at 11 o'clock at Middleburg, at which place interment will be made. Deceased was a devout Christian woman and by those who had learned to know her intimately her death is sincerely mourned. She was 34 years old and was born and raised at Oriental, Juniata County. Surviving to mourn the loss of a devoted wife and loving mother are the husband and two children, Roland and Malura.

Harry Harvey Dead.

Harry Harvep, son of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Harvey, died th the home of his parents at State College Tuesday night about 10.30 o'lock. He had been in failing health for several years, and during that period was under treatment by specialists in a number of cities. He was aged about 22 years. Funeral services will be held from the late home on Friday and interment made at the Pine Hall cemetery.

The Chautauqua comes to Bellefonte on the 17th of July.

On that date the Bellefonte Committee has to turn over to them Fourteen Hundred (1,400) Dollars, the price of Seven Hundred (700) Season tickets.

The gate receipts go, to the Chautauqua Association, and do not help in raising the guarantee which Thirty (30) people of Bellefonte have put up in order to bring this weeks entertainment to the town.

The ticket selling committee urges the people who are expecting to attend The Chautauqua to buy their Season Tickets now, for two reasons.

1st.—That the guarantors may meet their financial obligation the day it falls due.

2nd.—That the work of the ticket selling committee may be lightened-work which is always hard, and in the heat of last week was doubly arduous.

Ladies to Hold Festival.

Once more the Ladies Aid Society of he Pleasant Gap Lutheran church have decided to hold an old-time festival. It will be held in Noll's grove at Pleasant Gap, on Saturday evening, next. The proceeds will be applied to the church fund. Some twenty young ladies have been assigned to wait on the large crowd expected to be in attendance. Ice cream of all flavors, cakes, water melon, tropical fruits and numerous other delicacies in abundance will be served. Ye lovers of a jolly good time are cordially invited to be present. All have the liberty of inviting their friends. Come one, come all.

New Porch Rug.

The time for open air entertaining is here, and for this reason interest is incresing in those things that tend to add to its charm. One of these is a new lawn and veranda rug, which is woven out of Cape Cod grass fiber, the fiber being in cord form, both thick and durable. It is woven in soft colors that give a parquetry floor effect. Being impervious to water, it may be spread upon the lawn to protect guests from dampness and yet not be injured from moisture. It also makes an excellent veranda and cottage rug.

There is also a French porch rug, oval, octagonal or elliptical in shape, made of fiber, which has an openwork scallop border that is very attractive. It comes in many sizes and shapes.

Outdoor Sleeping Cap.

The custom of sleeping out of doors is becoming so popular that there are now many devices for making it possible to sleep outdoors and still enjoy all the comforts of an indoor bed. One of these articles is a cap which covers the head and well over the cheeks and forehead, with a cape portion that extends over the neck. It is fashioned of soft knit cloth with a pretty touch of color in the silk binding and a silk tie under the chin.

The mole would live beneath the ground, and nature closed his eyes.—Henry Drummond.

STATE-WIDE PRIMARIES

General Outline of Election Law Passed by Recent Legislature.

The state-wide primary bill, over which there has been so much discussion and no little dissension, was passed in the closing hours of the Legislature.

In its final form the bill provides for the nomination at primaries of all elective officers from United States senators and governors down to and including election district officers, state committeemen and party officers. The provisions of the bill relating to nomination papers will remain the same as under the present election laws, both before and after primaries. This also holds true regarding the pre-emption of party names.

State delegates are to be elected at the coming fall primary and again at the spring primary. After that the committeemen will be elected only at spring primaries. National committeemen will be named by the state committee except where national party rules are otherwise.

The assistance clause in the bill will be the same as in the law of 1906, which briefly is to the effect that voters must swear that they cannot read the names on the ballot before they can have assistance.

The bill also provides for a preferential vote for presidential candidates at the primary. Candidates for president shall select their own presidential electors.

The fall primary is to be held in odd numbered years on the third Tuesday in September. The spring primary in even numbered years on the third Tuesday in May. Under the present laws, primaries are held on Saturdays in the afternoon. The polls are to be open from 7 a. m. until 7 p. m. and saloons will be closed from 6 a. m. to 8 p. m.

The non-partisan provisions of the bill are stricken out. The program calls for a non-partisan ballot in separate bill. The non-partisan ballot will include only judges, that is all supreme, superior, county and mnnicipal court judges.

Party enrollment is stricken out of the bill and is taken care of under the Flynn party enrollment bill, which as agreed upon by conference committee.

The election also calls for a separate bill for the nomination and election of United States senators, although this is also taken care of in the state-wide primary bill. United States senators are to be nominated and elected in even numbered years. The governor is to appoint in case of vacancies.

Potato Beetle.

The insect commonly called the Potato bug, but more accurately known as the Colorado or Striped potato beetle, has again made its appearance in destructive numbers over the greater portion of Pennsylvania. To a person who wrote for all necessary information for suppressing this and kindred pests, Dr. H. A. Surface, State Zoologist, at Harrisburg, replied as follows:

"In spraying for potato pests it is advisable to combine a fungicide and insecticide, in order to make both applications at one time and thus reduce the expense. This can be done without losing the efficiency of the insecticide for the chewing insects, or of the fungicide for preventing plant diseases such as blight, etc. For the Colorado potato bettle arsenate of lead is now almost universally used by the more progressive growers, who apply three pounds to fifty gallons of water or of the Bordeaux mixture. If the arsenate of lead is in the dry or powdered form two pounds in fifty gallons is sufficient. A few persons are still using Paris green, of which one-half pound is used in place of the two or three pounds of arsenate of lead.

"Experiments have proven that for purposes of preventing blight and other diseases, the Bordeaux mixture is much better than lime-sulfur on potatoes. Make this by using four or five pounds of fresh lime and three or four pounds of bluestone in fifty gallons of water. Make it up fresh as needed. Dissolve the bluestone in anything excepting a metal vessel. Use hot water to dissolve it. Dilute to some extent before adding the lime water, which, of course, should be strained when going into the spray tank. Stir the arsenate of lead until it is thoroughly suspended in the water, and pour it into the tank containing the Bordeaux mixture. Keep it agitated or stirred.

"Spray the potatoes when they are about six inches tall, and repeat this once every two or three weeks thereafter. When Potato bugs are present spray well with either arsenate of lead alone, or with Paris green, or with the arsenate and Bordeaux mixture combined.

"It should be remembered that the Boadeaux mixture is only a fungicide, and in this case is used for the prevention of the blight. It does not prevent scab, neither does it kill the beetles without the addition of the arsenate."

MRS. WILSON'S SECRETARY.

Wife of President Elect Selects Miss Hagner, Who Served Mrs. Roosevelt.

The announcement that Miss Isabella L. Hagner has been selected as social secretary by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson is of interest in Washington, where Miss Hagner had considerable prominence during the Roosevelt administration. She served in a similar capacity to Mrs. Roosevelt, whose personal friend she had been before the Roosevelts entered the White House.

Miss Hagner was prominently identified with the social life of the entire Roosevelt administration. She is the daughter of Dr. Charles E. Hagner and a niece of Justice Alexander B. Hagner of the supreme court of the District of Columbia. She has been identified with smart residential circles from the time she entered society. Since the close of the Roosevelt administration Miss Hagner has been a clerk in the state department.

What to Do With Apples.

Belmont baked apples are made in the following way: Wipe selected red apples and make two circular parallel cuts through the skin of each, leaving a three-fourths of an inch band around the apple midway between stem and blossom ends. Put in baking dish, sprinkle tops generously with sugar and add boiling water to cover bottom of pan. Bake in a hot oven until the apples are soft, basting with sirup in pan.

To make Dutch apple cakes, says the Woman's Home Companion, mix one cupful of scalded milk, one-third cupful of butter, one-third cupful of sugar and one-third teaspoonful of salt. When lukewarm add one yeast cake broken in small pieces, two unbeaten eggs and bread flour (once sifted) to make a soft dough. Cover and let rise until mixture has nearly doubled its bulk. Cut down, beat thoroughly, cover and again let rise. But down, spread evenly in a buttered dripping pan and brush over with melted butter. Wipe, pare, cut in eighths and remove cores from five sour apples. Press sharp edges of apple sections into the dough in parallel rows, lengthwise of pan. Mix one fourth cupful of sugar and one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon and sprinkle over dough. Then sprinkle with two tablespoonfuls of currants. Cover, again let rise until light and bake thirty minutes.

Hideous Hats.

Why should the Irish caubeen, one of the most hideous of headdresses, be adopted by beauty as one of fashion's favorites? It has a strange, unfinished, rough-jolly kind of expression that assorts very badly with a poetic face. There is no gainsaying that sometimes it is a very becoming headgear, but nothing can make up for its want of dignity. Many girls seem to study the best way to look utterly unkempt. It is a mistake.

A Little Valentine Girl With a Great Big Heart.

The young lady in the picture surely has gone to a great deal of trouble with her valentine. Just think what an amount of work and patience were required to fashion such a large and beautiful heart! She is evidently pleased with her handiwork. The expression on her face shows that. Of course she must have made it all by herself! She wouldn't look so happy otherwise. Wonder who she intends it for? Perhaps for papa or perhaps for mamma. More likely it is for mother, although it is hard to tell. Anyway, whoever gets it will be overjoyed, for who could help being happy when such a charming little girl remembers them so lovingly on Valentine morning?

Lincoln and the Boy.

Here is a story of Lincoln and the children:

When the president was in Springfield, Ill., he met a little boy who was introduced to him and allowed to shake the great man's hand. Of course the boy boasted of this honor among his schoolmates, who wouldn't believe him, making his life miserable by their unkind speeches. Young America, however hurt he felt, was not going to be put down by a little thing like that. No, indeed! He sat down and wrote a letter to Lincoln telling him of his trouble. After awhile he received a letter which is still preserved. It read:

Executive Mansion, March 19, 1861.

To Whom it May Concern:

I did see and talk with Master George Evans Potter last May at Springfield, Ill. Respectfully, A. LINCOLN.

From that time young George, instead of being laughed at, became the envy of the other boys. The part of the story that most interests us, however, is that Lincoln at this anxious time, amid the thousand things demanding his attention, should have found time to heed the unimportant request of a schoolboy. It shows us that Lincoln hated all injustice, however humble the object of it might be.

Lincoln, the Kind Hearted.

When Lincoln visited Fortress Monroe in 1863 his attention was called to a narrow door, bound with iron, the use of which he was anxious to learn.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Oh, that is the sweat box," was the reply. "It is used for refractory sailors. A man in there is treated to a big dose of steam heat and has very little ventilation. It brings him around pretty quickly."

Lincoln, ever merciful, demanded that he be allowed to try the treatment to which thousands of American sailors were subjected yearly.

Taking off his hat—for he was several inches over six feet in height—he entered the inclosure, which he found to be little more than three feet in length or width. At a signal from him the door was to be opened. It was then closed and the steam turned on. He had been inside hardly three minutes before the signal was given. President Lincoln had experienced something he had never known had existed before. Turning to Secretary Welles of the navy department, he ordered that no such inclosure as the sweat box should ever be allowed on any vessel flying the American flag.

Conundrums.

Why are bakers the most self denying people? Because they sell what they knead (need) themselves.

What relation is that child to its own father who is not its own father's own son? His daughter.

When does a pig become landed property? When it is turned into a meadow.

Making Valentines.

All the year we save up things
Cut from papers, hearts and rings,
Little boys called Cupids, too,
And all sorts of flowers will do.

Then we take some paper white,
And we scallop it just right,
And across the top we write
Some nice line that reads like this:
"To my sweetheart, with a kiss."

Now we're ready to begin,
And we paste a Cupid in
And perhaps a wreath and dove,
With a scroll which says, "True love."

We pick out from all the rest
One for mother that is best,
And we write, "Our hearts are true,
Dearest Valentine, to you."

—Alice T. Curtis in Youth's Companion.

Ocean Ships Sow Seeds.

During the last few years botanists have noticed that there has been a great leveling up of plants on the innumerable islands scattered over the Pacific. The vegetation of two islands 1,000 miles apart is as likely as not to be exactly the same, while formerly there used to be marked difference. The reason is said to be the steamship. The Pacific is now covered with a network of steamer routes. At each port the wind pours a fine powder of almost invisible seeds over each ship and blows ashore some of those she received at previous ports of call. Thus ships are, without knowing it, altering the vegetation of the Pacific islands. Trains sow seeds too. At any rate, that is the explanation offered by botanists for the way in which the middle west is growing plants that once belonged to the Atlantic coast. Even the barren eastern slopes of the Rockies are now growing trees that were never planted by the hand of man. The trains have done the sowing.—Stray Stories.

A Tax Scheme That Failed.

Switzerland has always prided itself on its independence, and in fiscal matters this proud spirit, which will brook no interference with the rights of the individual, even by the state in quest of revenue, has sometimes been exhibited in curious ways, says the Pall Mall Gazette. As the inquisitorial methods of income tax collectors are abhorrent to the freedom loving Swiss, boxes were once set up in several cantons to receive the voluntary contributions of loyal citizens. It was hoped that this method of relying on the public spirit of the people would prove successful in raising money for public ends; but, alas for human nature, in the course of time the collectors on opening the boxes found nothing but—trousers buttons. So the voluntary system, after fair trial, had to be reluctantly abandoned in favor of a declaration of capital and income which is liable to official investigation.

Napoleon's Weapon Rusty.

In recalling the sword which Napoleon presented to the Russian Grand Duke Constantine at Tilsitt on the occasion of the treaty between Napoleon and Russia in 1807, a Paris newspaper asserts that, although Napoleon always carried two pistols in his saddle, he very rarely used them. His service sword, as he called it, was so rusted in its sheath that at the battle of Arcis-sur-Aube in 1814 he had to call an aid-de-camp to help him draw it.

It is also said that the emperor, whose figure in a long gray cloak and "bicorne" is everywhere familiar, had made for himself a helmet and breastplate set with emeralds and diamonds. But on first trying them on he found that he looked too much like a Roman warrior, and he discarded them. This armor that Napoleon had on but once is today to be seen under glass in the army museum.

English Official Red Tape.

In "Memories of the Sea" Admiral Penrose Fitzgerald says that one day after Lord Gilford had been retired from the quarterdeck for a spell to a position in the admiralty office, an old friend and shipmate visited him there and found him sitting at his desk, up to his eyes in papers, nursing his wounded wrist, silent and morose, pondering a question he did not seem able to solve.

"That pile of papers you see there," said he, "is the result of three months' heated controversy as to whether the boys in the training ships are to be supplied with pewter spoons or whether they are to dip up the new ration of treacle with their bread and without the use of spoons, and we have not settled it yet."

The Split Farthing Club.

A club limited in membership to men who agreed to stint themselves to the utmost in order to increase their possessions was the Split Farthing club of London. One member is reported to have had his garments so darned that there was not enough of the original left to show the texture. The members presented so starved an appearance that it was said there was not an ounce of fat among the lot.

No Use In Objecting.

The cynical person was standing in front of a part of an exhibition of local art talent labeled "Art Objects."

"Well, I suppose Art does object and I can't blame her, but there doesn't seem to be any help for it," he finally said.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Looks That Way.

"Many criminals are more desperate after they have served a number of terms in prison," remarked the new member of the club.

"Yes; they must be possessed of a courage born of convictions," agreed the man who knows.—Buffalo Express.

Pretty Lazy.

"Nodles is positively the laziest man I know. He has an invention fixed so that by merely pulling a wire in bed he can light the fire, but that doesn't seem to improve matters."

"Why not?"

"He's too lazy to pull the wire."

No Difference.

"Papa, what does being disappointed in love mean?"

"Why, either marrying or being jilted by the girl you are in love with."—Houston Post.

"What is that?"

UPHOLDS NEWSPAPERS

Federal Judge McPherson Makes Strong Plea to Press Association.

"No judge has ever yet maintained his dignity and never will by bringing an editor before the court and punishing him because of animadversions made through the columns of the newspaper.

"It would be helpful to the courts if editors of learning and character would in a dignified and intelligent manner discuss the rulings of the courts, whether by commendation or whether by adverse criticism."

These statements were made in a paper by Smith McPherson, United States district judge, southern district of Iowa, which was read before the National Press Association at Colorado Springs.

"The freedom of the press is one of the institutions of this country, and as such will ever exist, and rightly so," he continued. "And no one believes in this more than do the courts. It was but recently that the courts righteously, against terrific pressure, prevented the dragging of editors, one of them nearly 1000 miles, to make answer to an alleged libel.

"Most newspapers, like most men, are sincere as to their utterances. Their unfair criticisms come from lack of information. They are too impatient to strike.

"In speaking of the relations that do, or ought to, exist between the newspapers and the courts, there are fundamental errors which should be brushed away. One of these is in fact that a great many of the judges seemingly believe that because they wear the robes of office they are or should be beyond criticism. This is fallacy.

"I believe as much as does any one in maintaining the dignity of the courts and that the people should have respect for the courts. But a judge must command respect in some other way than by making this argument. He cannot command respect by becoming a recluse, nor by wearing a silk hat or a morning frock coat, or a white tie, or by speaking in general tones of voice."

Electrifying the P. R. R.

The Pennsylvania railroad has given out the information that the work of electrifying the main line of the Philadelphia division from Broad street station to Paoli, will be completed and ready for operation by the fall of 1914. The engineering feature of the work is tedious, as many details have to be considered, but it is expected that by fall the surveys will have been finished and plans prepared to permit the letting of contracts. So far the only physical work being done is that of extending the lobby at Broad street station.

For the Children

Happy Young Bather on the Beach at Rockaway.

With the return of the summer sun the various beaches in the vicinity of New York are thronged with young and old enjoying a dip in the surf. After Coney Island, Rockaway Beach is the most popular seaside resort. Here any day during the summer may be seen hundreds of little ones playing in the sand. Trainloads of the poor children from the east side are taken daily to Rockaway, where they are provided with lunches. Some of them are kept for a week's outing, there being several large charitable institutions at the beach that provide accommodations. The youngster in the picture is making the most of his opportunity and, if expression counts for anything, is having a good time. The photo man caught him just as he came out of the water.

The Bird Catcher.

This is good fun for children, and even those of larger growth have been known to take part in it.

You must first decide which one is to be the bird catcher. The others each choose the name of a bird, but no one must choose the owl, as it is forbidden. All of the players then sit in a circle with their hands on their knees except the bird catcher, who stands in the center and tells a tale about birds, taking care to mention the ones he knows have been chosen by the company.

As each bird's name is spoken the owner must imitate its note as well as he can, but when the owl is named all hands must be put behind the chairs in silence and remain there until the next bird's name is mentioned.

When the bird catcher cries "all the birds" the players must altogether give their imitations of the various birds they have chosen. Should any player fail to give the cry when his bird is named or forget to put his hands behind his chair when the owl is mentioned he has to change places with the bird catcher.

Lawn Bubble Party.

A tennis net is desirable for this amusement. The net may be decorated with flags or ribbons or colored paper, just to add to its gay appearance. Girls range themselves on one side of the net, boys on the other, or they may pay as partners.

The hostess provides a bowl of soapy water, to which a tablespoonful of glycerin is added to contribute to the beauty of the prismatic colors, and gay pipes tied with ribbons, the color determining the sides.

The girls blow the bubbles, and the boys blow them over the net from their side to prevent the airy balls from floating into their domain. Each bubble that succeeds in floating over the net counts fifteen points for the side from which it came.

Competition may take other forms, as the largest bubble, the one retaining its form the longest or the longest chain of bubbles winning a prize. Ornamental pipes, fancy soap boxes filled with bonbons and smiliar trifles are suitable for prizes.

Great Shadows.

From the summit of Mount Diablo, in California, may be seen a curious phenomenon. Four times a year—once every three months—the sun rises at such an angle that a shadow over ten miles long is thrown on the plain beneath. The peak of Tenerife projects a huge shadow, stretching upward of forty miles across the deep and partly eclipsing the adjoining isles.

Cookery Points

When Raspberries Are Ripe.

For breakfast raspberries can be served, cold and fresh, with cream, or they can be daintily served in glass dishes with a little sirup poured over them. To prepare them in this way choose plump, perfect berries and put them in a china or porcelain or glass dish. Make a sirup of equal parts of sugar and water boiled for ten minutes and pour it, hot, over the berries. Put them immediately on the ice and chill all night.

Raspberries can also be prepared in this way for luncheon and can be given a more piquant flavor if stemmed currants, half as many as there are berries, are added to them.

A hearty raspberry pudding, which is wholesome enough for children, is made thus: Thicken a quart of hot milk with a tablespoonful of flour rubbed smooth in a few tablespoonfuls of cold milk. Cook it for ten or fifteen minutes. Then add a saltspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of vanilla, a cupful of fine breadcrumbs, the beaten yolks of four eggs, half a cupful of granulated sugar and the stiffly beaten white of one egg. Butter a baking dish and put the batter in it. Cover it thickly with fresh raspberries and sprinkle them generously with sugar and a few fresh, stemmed currants. Bake it in a moderate oven until it is firm. Then make a meringue of three egg whites beaten stiff and sweetened with four tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar and brown it in the oven. Serve either cold or hot with cream.

Raspberry Dumpling.

Raspberry dumplings that are light and delicate are made in this way: Boil a cupful of water with two tablespoonfuls of butter and add a cupful of sifted flour. Stir over the fire until the batter leaves the sides of the pan, then take from the fire and cool. Add four beaten eggs, two-thirds of a cupful of flour mixed with a scant teaspoonful of baking powder and pat it out in a thin layer. Cut rounds the size of the saucer of a teacup and on each round put two tablespoonfuls of berries. Pull the dough up to cover the fruit and bake in a buttered pan for thirty minutes in a moderate oven. Brush the dumplings before baking them to give them a glaze. Serve them hot or cold with a sauce made of raspberries and sirup or with hard sauce.

Delicious raspberry tarts can be made by cooking paste in patty tins, filling the shells with rice or beans in waxed paper to keep the paste from bubbling and filling the shells with fresh raspberries covered with sugar and whipped cream.

Raspberry Pudding.

A delicious raspberry pudding is made in individual portions. Have ready well buttered individual pudding or custard cups. Make a dough of two cupfuls of flour, a teaspoonful and a half of baking powder, half a teaspoonful of salt, all well sifted together, and enough milk to make it of the consistency to drop from a spoon. Fill each of the little cups about a third full of raspberries and cover them with dough. Be careful to let it reach only to within an inch of the tops of the cups. Steam it, tightly covered, over boiling water for twenty minutes and serve immediately with hard sauce.

For the sauce cream a cupful of granulated sugar with half as much butter. Beat the whites of two eggs stiff and add them to the butter and sugar and beat a few moments longer. Add a tablespoonful of brandy and a little grated nutmeg and put on the ice for half an hour before serving.

Raspberry Bavarian Cream.

Raspberry Bavarian cream is a hot day dessert which does not require freezing. To make it soak half a package of gelatin for two hours in half a cupful of cold water. In the meantime mash a quart of raspberries with a cupful of sugar and let them stand together an hour. Whip a pint of cream to a stiff froth. Strain the raspberry juice and pulp free from seeds through a wire strainer. Pour half a cupful of boiling water on the gelatin and strain that on the juice. Put the liquid in a porcelain basin and stand it in a pan of water with ice in it. Beat the liquid and when it is as thick as custard stir in the whipped cream. Pour the whole into a two quart mold and put it in the icebox to harden. Serve with whipped cream.

Pineapple Sponge.

Soak one-half package of gelatin in one-half cupful of cold water, dissolve over steam, add one cupful of grated pineapple and the juice of half a small lemon and sweeten to taste. Stir over cracked ice until the mixture begins to thicken, fold in the stiffly beaten whites of six eggs, turn into a wet ring mold and place on ice until firm. Unmold and serve with the center filled with whipped cream, slightly sweetened and flavored with a few drops of vanilla.

Steak With Bananas.

Broil a sirloin steak, place on a hot platter, spread both sides with a tablespoonful of melted butter mixed with one teaspoonful of salt and one-fourth as much white pepper. Over this sprinkle one tablespoonful of grated horseradish. Pare three bananas, split lengthwise, fry brown in butter and lay over the hot steak.

COATEE AND SKIRT OF SILK.

Futurist silk in a charming tapestry design in moss green tones was used for the coatee and skirt of this frock, the tunic being of white eponge. Queens Who Could Earn Living.

The queen of England would have no difficulty in supporting herself. She would be most valuable in a dairy, and as a needlewoman she has few equals. If her husband were a workingman instead of being a king she could darn the children's clothes. Her majesty could also make a living by two great accomplishments she possesses. These are her fine contralto voice and her capacity as water colorist.

The dowager queen of Italy could earn her living as a lecturer on Shakespeare and Dante.

Queen Elizabeth of Bulgaria could make her living as a hospital nurse.

Queen Helena of Italy, Queen Victoria of Spain and Queen Wilhelmina of Holland would all three be at their best when looking after children.

Queen Maud of Norway, under the name of Graham Irving, has met with much applause as dramatic author.

Queen Elizabeth of Belgium holds a doctor's diploma from the University of Leipzig.

Piquant Parasols.

The parasols of this year of color, 1913, are very brilliant. As for shapes, the imagination fails to conjure up a possible form in which they have not already appeared. They are so gay and original that they will be invaluable adjuncts to help out a simple summer dress.

One curious fad in this connection is that of using a tassel of old and faded silk to adorn the handle of one's sunshade. If you have anything of the kind among your belongings now is the time to resurrect it, as Paris, with proverbial originality, has declared it to be "grand chic."

Paris also insists on the wearing of gloves after having allowed them to lapse last winter into a sort of "innocuous desuetude." The natural color is now more fashionable than white. Long suede mousquetaire gloves are worn with abbreviated sleeves, and the more they wrinkle the better is Dame Fashion pleased.

Charming Summer Hat.

A charming leghorn hat has a bowl shaped crown entirely covered with narrow plaited frills of pink malines. Two large pink roses are caught on either side of the wide brim.

HEALTH MARRIAGE LAW

Bill Passed by Legislature Has Drastic Requirements.

Legislation to prevent the marriages of persons physically or mentally unfit has been provided by the recent Legislature.

The Richards house bill aims to bring about a reduction in the birth rate of defectives.

The bill provides that no marriage license shall be issued where either of the applicants is an imbecile or epileptic, of unsound mind, to any man who is or has been within five years an inmate of any county asylum or home for indigent persons, unless it satisfactorily appears that the cause of such condition has been removed and that such applicant is physically able to support a family.

Persons desiring to marry must file a statement, as a condition of obtaining license, setting forth that they are not afflicted with a transmissible disease.

Supporters of the measure believe that its enactment will result in a large decrease in the births of feebleminded children, and that it will eventually relieve the state of the care of many unfortunates.

Cattle Poisoned and Died.

Nine head of fine young cattle belonging to John S. Huey, residing in the Big Valley between Allensville and Airy Dale, were poisoned in the fields several days ago and died. The matter has been reported to the State Department of Health. It is not known what is responsible for the death of the cattle, but an investigation is being made with the view of determining the cause. Mr. Huey witnessed the death of one of the animals. It ran around in a circle about a dozen time, evidently in great pain, then dropped to the ground and expired.

Robert F. Hunter, agent for the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company, several days ago received a letter from the home office of the company apprising him of the fact that the business done by him in the month of June was far in excess of that turned in by any other representative. As a consequence Mr. Hunter receives a handsome gold watch from the company.

Merrill Knapp, a Bellefonte boy who is meeting with gratifying success at Beaver Falls, visited his old home here over the fourth of July. Merrill is employed with the Standard Scale Works at Beaver Falls and says that his company has lots of orders booked, insuring continued busy times. Like lots of others he says he always is sorry the plant of this company was removed from Bellefonte to Beaver Falls.

Major and Mrs. Robert A. Cassidy, of Canton, Ohio, are greeting their numerous admiring friends in and about Bellefonte. The Major stopped over here on the return trip from the Gettysburg encampment. He spoke in glowing terms of the efforts made by the State and federal governments to afford the old soldiers every comfort possible at Gettysburg. An incident related by Major Cassidy was the deep impression made on him as he stood at the entrance to a railroad coach and saw seat after seat filled with white haired men. The one sad feature of the encampment, he added, was the parting of the veterans for the return trip home, most of them seeming to realize that they would never meet again.

L. T. MUNSON DEAD

Well Known Resident Succumbs Following Lingering Illness.

Following a lingering illness which had gradually weakened his system, the primary cause being cancer, Lorenzo T. Munson one of Bellefonte's best known residents, died at his late home here at 11 o'clock on the morning of Saturday, June 28th. While his death was not unexpected the news of his passing away was received with sorrow by his many friends. Funeral services were held on the following Tuesday morning, the services at the grave at the Union cemetery being in the hands of the Masons.

Some months ago Mr. Munson underwent a slight operation. A short time after this his friends became aware that he was suffering from cancer. He subsequently recovered sufficiently to be up and about and for a short time he was able to resume his duties at the Central Railroad Co. of Penna. passenger station. A relapse followed and from this he never rallied.

The deceased was a son of ex-Sheriff Levi Munson, who died at his home in Philipsburg many years ago. Besides his wife he leaves one son, John, and the following brothers and sisters, viz: Charles, of Kane; Harry, of Philipsburg; Mrs. Julia Bollinger, Wellsboro; Myrtle, wife of William McClelland, of Bellefonte, and Margaret, wife of W. S. Rhoads, of Iselin, Indiana county.

MARRIED 60 YEARS.

John Mountz, Native of Curtin, Was Wedded Three Score Years Ago.

A happy event was celebrated on Saturday, June 28th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Mountz, near Van-Scoyoc station, along the foothills of the Allegheny mountains, it being the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding day. Contributing to the happiness of the day was the presence of the children, grand-children and great-grand-children of the venerable couple. All told upward of forty persons were present. A big family reunion dinner was served.

Mrs. Mountz's maiden name was Isabelle Emaugh and she was born at Bald Eagle, December 13, 1836. Mr. Mountz was born at Curtin, Centre county, on September 13, 1831. His occupation in his younger days was that of a forgeman in Centre county, and he grew into vigorous manhood, taking the best physical care of himself, which still leaves him hale and hearty in his eighty-second year.

They entered life's journey of wedded bliss in 1853. When the call for volunteers came at the beginning of the Civil War, Mr. Mountz enlisted in the 148th Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry and served creditably.

Mrs. Mountz has a brother living, Jacob Emaugh, of Pennsylvania Furnace, who was present at the family reunion. Mr. Mountz has one brother and two sisters, Sanford Mountz, of Kansas City, and Mrs. Nancy Jolly, of Missouri, and Mrs. Cristina Fort, of Los Angeles, California.

Norman Thompson Dead.

Especially sad was the death of Norman Thompson, who passed away at the Bellefonte hospital on Sunday afternoon, last, at one o'clock. His death was due to typhoid fever and followed an illness of several weeks. For some time past he had been employed with the Packard Automobile Company in Philadelphia, being engaged in testing cars. He came home from that city about the middle of June and complained of not feeling well. On June 24th he was admitted to the hospital, his trouble being diagnosed as typhoid fever. The day he went to the hospital was his 24th birthday. It was believed that his youth and strong and vigorous constitution would enable him to pull through, but on Sunday, last, he suffered a sinking spell and gradually passed away. Funeral services were held yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, conducted by Rev. E. H. Yocum, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church. Interment was made in the Union cemetery. Deceased was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Thompson, of Bellefonte, and was a bright, popular young man. He was well liked by all. In addition to his parents he is survived by a widow and little daughter, also one brother and one sister, Robert and Hazel.

Mrs. James C. Derr Dead.

Anna Catherine, wife of James C. Derr, the well known auctioneer, died at her late home in Bellefonte at one o'clock Tuesday morning, last, after an extended illness. Her death was due to a complication of diseases. Deceased was a daughter of David McMullen and had she lived until September 7th, next, would have been 49 years of age. Surviving are her husband and one son, George, also two brothers, Harry and John Boyer, both of Bellefonte. Funeral services will be held on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, conducted by Rev. C. W. Winey, pastor of the United Brethren church, of which the deceased was a member.

Mrs Edward Garman entertained on Wednesday evening.

Dr. and Mrs. H. W. Tate are away on a ten days motor trip.

Mrs. Harry C. Yeager is entertaining Miss Wilson, of Altoona.

Thomas A. Shoemaker and two sons, who had quarters for a short time at the Bush House, are back home, the quarantine for mumps at their home having been lifted.

It was reported in Bellefonte this week that James Bayard was married last Saturday at Johnstown, where he has been employed for some time.

Misses Ida and Rose Fauble entertained with a thimble party on Wednesday evening of last week in honor of their house guests Miss Reese and Miss Lee.

Mrs. Frank Ball, of Philadelphia, is the guest of Mrs. T. Clayton Brown, and before returning home she will go to Axe Mann to visit with her mother, Mrs. Harvey Griffith. Claude Dawson, wife and little daughter are visiting at the Griffith home.
